Developer of Auden Living donates masks to first responders & hospitals in Spartanburg

New York, NY - Real estate developer DMG Investments and its signature properties, One Park and Auden Living, have announced donations of masks to help communities and first responders during the COVID-19 pandemic. In an effort to help support the communities where mask shortages are threatening hospitals, first responders and residents, DMG Investments has begun distributing masks to all healthcare facilities within a five mile radius of each of their properties.

The firm's Auden Living line comprises student housing developments in Ithaca, NY; Albany, NY; Spartanburg and Houston, TX. In those cities, Auden has begun distributing boxes of masks to all hospitals and healthcare clinics within a 5 mile radius. Masks have also been provided to the properties' student populations.

As COVID-19 continues to impact an increasing number of residents and healthcare providers across the US, DMG Investments remains focused on using its resources to support the local communities it has helped foster.

Ingles Markets, USC Upstate partner to make impact on local charities

This winter USC Upstate Athletics and Ingles Markets entered into a comprehensive marketing partnership and among the most important pieces of the wide-ranging agreement were a series of donations to the community based on the performance of various Spartan teams.

"In just a short time Ingles and USC Upstate have shown the power of meaningful partnerships", says Melissa Leavell, Advertising Director, Ingles Markets. "We are so honored to be part of this dynamic duo and part of the USC Upstate family."

For every three point basket made by a men's or women's basketball player or strikeout from a Spartan baseball or softball pitcher, Ingles made a contribution to three local charitable organizations.

The first Ingles donation program to be set up was $3 for 3's - a $3.00 donation for every three-point basket made last basketball season. The partnership benefitted the Gibbs Cancer Center and Research Institute Survivorship Programs.

The two Spartan basketball teams combined for 344 trifectas, marking a total donation of $1,032 to the survivorship programs.

The 2020 spring season was just getting cranked up as the college athletics world, and eventually all of society, halted to battle the COVID-19 pandemic. While the onset of the pandemic cost the women's basketball team at least one game to add to the three-point basket total, the pandemic cut the baseball and softball seasons roughly in half. In fact, neither team made it into Big South Conference competition.

The Spartan softball team was 17-7 when the season came to an abrupt end. As of March 13, the Spartans racked up 141 strikeouts. For each strikeout, Ingles will make a $1 donation to the Hope Remains Ranch, operated by Upstate softball alum Melanie Watt.

Hope Remains offers a place where hurting children and adults can experience hope and healing by participating in various programs using equine therapy. Hope Remains Ranch is committed to offering biblically sound instruction in all of our programs, which includes biblical counseling, The Mane Event - an after-school program for children age 5-17, stable care, Healing Hooves and Marvelous Mini's, a mobile unit taking horses to area schools working with special needs, autistic and children with various behavioral needs.

On the baseball diamond, Upstate was 13-5 when play halted and had amassed 165 strikeouts, and thus a $165 donation for the Carolina Miracle League. The CML is a charitable organization that provides children with mental and/or physical challenges an opportunity to play baseball as a team member in an organized league.

The COVID-19 pandemic also leaves the record number of participants, 155, in the Miracle League this spring in a holding pattern.

Ingles will present the donations for each program during a ceremony to be held during a USC Upstate home athletic event this fall or early winter. A date for this ceremony has not been set.

USC Upstate and Ingles share a common goal to be champions for the greater good of our community. Throughout the conversations around these donation programs gratitude has been a common sentiment. Gibbs Cancer Center patient Melody Beattie summarized it best, "Gratitude makes sense of our past, brings peace for today, and creates a vision for tomorrow. USC Upstate and Ingles we are grateful to have you as partners."

Sherman becomes first chiropractic college to install CBCT imaging

True to its commitment to leading chiropractic education and improving patient care, Sherman College in Spartanburg has become the first chiropractic college to introduce cone beam computed tomography (CBCT) to its radiology department.

CBCT is a radiographic imaging method that allows accurate, three-dimensional imaging of hard tissue structures; its use and emergence in medical diagnostic imaging make CBCT an exciting addition to chiropractic radiographic analysis in the upper cervical region of the spine.

"Adding new technologies like cone beam computed tomography here at Sherman College further enhances our doctor of chiropractic program, improves patient care, and increases engagement and research opportunities within the profession and the community," said Vice President for Academic Affairs Joe Donofrio, D.C., '94, A.C.P.

"We are proud to be the first chiropractic college to incorporate this technology into our curriculum and our patient care. Our radiology and technique faculty played a key role in discovering and promoting this opportunity for the college," Dr. Donofrio shared. "We expect that this unit will reveal details about cervical spine subluxations that we have likely never observed before."

Sherman College began the process of bringing CBCT to campus in fall 2019 as part of its "I'm Ready" fundraising campaign, which focuses on securing resources to prepare the next generation of doctors of chiropractic for success. College partners in this effort include the Blair Chiropractic Society and the International Chiropractors Association's (ICA) Council on Upper Cervical Care. Additional support for this and other technology enhancement projects is welcomed through the college's I'm READY campaign.

"The Blair Upper Cervical Society and the ICA Council on Upper Cervical Care are excited about the opportunities we are creating together at Sherman College of Chiropractic," said Tyler Evans, D.C., DCCJP. Dr. Evans serves on the Board of Directors of the ICA Council on Upper Cervical Care, as chair of its special committee on standards of practice, and a member of its committee on advanced imaging; he also serves on the Blair Upper Cervical Society's special committee on cone beam CT.

"The craniocervical junction is one of the most complex joints in the body, both biomechanically and neurologically, and cone beam CT is revolutionizing the way in which upper cervical chiropractors correct that region of the spine," Dr. Evans explained. "The research opportunities are endless, and we look forward to working with Sherman College to advance the upper cervical profession together."

The Planmeca VisoTM CBCT unit was installed March 2 in the radiology department at Sherman College's Chiropractic Health Center. This on-campus clinic provides approximately 30,000 patient visits each year to members of the Spartanburg and surrounding communities and serves as a teaching clinic for senior students in the doctor of chiropractic program.

The Planmeca VisoTM CBCT unit offers premium image quality and high-end usability. The unit is an impressive step forward in the evolution of cone beam imaging. Benefits of incorporating CBCT into patient care on Sherman College's campus include the following, and more:

- * Ability to acquire 3D images at significantly lower effective patient doses without a statistical reduction in image quality
- * Live virtual field of view (FOV) positioning that can be adjusted freely
- * Imaging that fits both orthogonal and articular

needs
* Proper upright neutral patient positioning for upper cervical analysis

* Intelligent patient support that provides stability without compromising patient comfort

* Movement artifact correction for imaging patients who have difficulty remaining completely still.

Sherman College faculty and staff are completing training on how to take and analyze images using the Planmeca unit. When training is complete, faculty plan to utilize the new technology in patient care and collect evidence of its effectiveness in characterizing vertebral subluxations (misalignments of the spine that cause nerve interference) and advancing the efficacy of chiropractic care.

"We hope to work in cooperation with field practitioners and chiropractic organizations such as the Blair Chiropractic Society and the ICA's Council on Upper Cervical Care to advance the use of technology in chiropractic care," Dr. Donofrio shared. "We are ready to take our profession to the next level and to the rest of the world."

Sherman College has been known for embracing emerging technology in chiropractic education; in 2007, it became the first chiropractic college on the East Coast to incorporate digital x-ray into its curriculum and Health Center services.

Sherman College of Chiropractic provides students with a comprehensive chiropractic education, preparing them to enter the field as doctors of chiropractic who are highly skilled, compassionate, ethical and successful. On its 80-acre campus in South Carolina, Sherman offers a first professional degree program unique in its approach to health care and known globally for the skill and art of chiropractic delivered by graduates. Don't let this health crisis overwhelm your kids

From the American Counseling Association

While the coronavirus crisis has increased stress levels for all of us, younger children and teens are often more strongly impacted by such a national health disaster.

Kids have not only heard or seen news reports of what is happening but many have also been directly affected by the closing of their schools and colleges.

Such changes produce stress and anxiety for young people. Will there be graduation ceremonies? Will school sports or social events return? I miss my friends. I've never done online classes before. What if I get sick or my parents do?

The reduced socialization that was part of each school day is another stress-producing factor for many children. And yes, even very young children get scared as they hear bits and pieces of the news or see their parents anxiety or the differences in the way the family is living.

There are various changes that parents might observe that show how today's problems are affecting your children. In younger children it might be excessive crying or irritation, the return of behaviors previously outgrown, or exhibiting high levels of worry or sadness.

In older children the stress can express itself as changes in eating and sleeping habits, or increased levels of irritability and "acting out" behaviors in teens. School performance may suffer, what were favorite activities may be avoided, and there might be reports of headaches or body pain for no clear reason.

As a parent you want to try and help your child, regardless of age, understand what is going on. An age appropriate discussion of COVID-19 is a starting point, one with answers the kids can understand. Try to be reassuring, making your child know that his or her safety is your primary concern.

Try to limit your kids' exposure to news or social media stories about what is happening. When needed, share solid information from reliable sources rather than having the kids pick up misleading "facts," rumors and advice from the Internet.

The more you can maintain normal, regular family routines, the more comforting it can be for your children. And the better example you can set by staying reliably informed and by setting an example, as much as possible, of a normal, healthy life, the easier it will be for your children to cope with the stress they may be experiencing. Most importantly, don't skip on reassuring hugs and love for your children.

During COVID-19, take simple steps to establish a new normal

(StatePoint) It's always the right time to commit to healthy habits, behaviors and steps to improve your physical and mental health. With the COVID-19 pandemic creating so much uncertainty and upending so many routines, experts say that focusing on the things within your control is particularly important.

"At this particular moment -- challenging as it may be -- it is very important for all of us as individuals to recognize that our actions can and do have a collective impact," says Dr. Patrice A. Harris, president of the American Medical Association (AMA). "A lot of people are grieving at this moment. Tragically some are grieving loss of loved ones; but people can also grieve the loss of employment, routines or the ability to be with family and friends. Everyone should know that these feelings are normal, and they should allow themselves to experience them."

Here some simple steps from the AMA to maintain your physical and mental health during the unusual times of COVID-19:

1. Channel your feelings of anxiety or helplessness into action. Practicing physical distancing and making sure to wash your hands with warm soapy water for at least 20 seconds are two steps that protect your health and the health of others. Create a safety action plan for you and your family. Also consider how small gestures -- like offering to pick up groceries for an older or at-risk neighbor who may be anxious about leaving home -- can make a big difference.

2. Take care of yourself physically. Get as much sleep as you can, try to include fruits and vegetables into your diet, and make sure you move. With many gyms and parks closed and physical distancing in place, it may seem harder to work out, so consider options at home, including dancing, to stay active.

3. Create new routines.

With more people working from home and/or caring for school-aged children, the daily lives we had before COVID-19 are a distant memory. But building routines -- time for work, time for meals, time for decompressing -- is critical to creating a new normal. In the world today, there are so many things we can't control, but our schedules are something we can.

4. Take time to turn off social media and the news. It is critical at this moment to know what is happening in the world and to stay connected with family and friends, but if social media and 24-hour news are making you anxious, consume them in doses.

5. Feel your feelings. It's natural to worry and be afraid at a moment like this. It is also important to remember there are physicians, public health officials at all levels of government, as well as experts in the private sector, working tirelessly to limit the spread and impact of COVID-19.

6. Stay connected. Social media gives us a common connection point during times of isolation, but there is real opportunity at this moment to stay connected via phone calls and video chats with friends, family, and even people you haven't heard from in a while. Physical distancing is important, but it's still okay to socialize.

7. If you have children, talk to them in an age-appropriate way, and avoid ascribing feelings to them. Don't say, "I know you're scared." Kids are observant and they're wise. They may know things are different, but they may not be afraid. Let them know smart people are working on ways to keep us all safe. Model healthy coping.

Couch theater: DVD previews to enjoy while you're quarantined

"Little Women" (PG) -D This treasured classic tale of the March sisters has been brought back again by director Greta Gerwig ("Ladybird"), adapted from Louisa May Alcott's novel and writings. It's a simple coming-of-age tale, from the perspective of Jo (Saoirse Ronan), the family writer, who chronicles her and her sisters' journey to independence. Florence Pugh plays Amy, the youngest, an artist and rival for the attentions of young neighbor Laurie (Timothee Chalamet). Emma Watson, Eliza Scanlan and Meryl Streep round out as Meg, Beth and Aunt March, respectively, all delivering performances that keep this Civil War-set tale as relevant and endearing as ever.

"Doolittle" (PG) -D Robert Downey Jr. headlines as Dr. Doolittle, the man who can talk to animals. He is joined by an exhaustive list of big-name celebrities who voice an entire menagerie of animals, from Rami Malek as a gorilla to Craig Robinson as a mouse. Even Tom Holland managed to make an appearance as a dog. The story goes that the doctor, cloistered with his animals after the death of his wife, is brought out for a brand new mission to assist a poisoned young queen. During the mission, he must outrun his rival and face new challenges to find a cure. It didn't go over well, and Downey effects a strange accent that is a little off-putting, but I found it to be watchable -- mostly for young kids.

"Cats" (PG) -D A young recently abandoned cat is introduced to life on the streets and a gang of cats called the Jellicles. Feline personalities vie for the crown of the Jellicle Ball and its reward: a trip to the Heaviside Layer and a better life. The thing about "Cats" is that it's not just a musical; it's a concept stage-play musical, and that spectacle doesn't always translate -- even with CGI and big-name voices. At least part of the uniquely special value of a stage play comes from the immersion in the experience. Absurdity makes sense on a stage, but on the screen, I'm distracted rather than buying in (although Jennifer Hudson's rendition of "Memory" as Grizelda is worth watching).

"Escape From Pretoria" (PG-13) -D A jailbreak drama out of 1979 South Africa stars Daniel Radcliffe as Tim Jenkin and Daniel Webber as Stephen Lee, real-life apartheid activists who were jailed in Pretoria Central Prison and who staged an escape along with a handful of other prisoners. It's based on Jenkin's book, "Inside Out: Escape from Pretoria Prison." The political prisoners hatch a plot to escape that becomes a race against time to execute. I thought it was a good mix of action and tension, with an especially nuanced performance by Radcliffe.

Complaint (Jury Trial) The Plaintiff complaining of the Defendant would respectfully show unto the Court as follows: 1. That the Plaintiff is a citizen and resident of Spartanburg County, South Carolina. 2. That upon information and belief, the Defendant, Raul

Legal Notices

Padilla is a citizen and resident of Laurens County, South Carolina.

3. That the accident which is the subject of this lawsuit occurred in Spartanburg County, South Carolina.

4. That on or about May 29, 2019 Plaintiff was parked facing east on private property near Woodruff, South Carolina. The Defendant was parked facing west on private property and improperly backing east on private property when suddenly and without warning he forcefully crashed into the rear of the Plaintiff's vehicle. Upon impact Plaintiff was hurled about within the interior of the motor vehicle causing her to suffer serious injuries which will be fully described herein.

5. That the injuries and damages sustained by Plaintiff were due to and caused by and were the direct and proximate result of the negligent and/or reckless, willful, and wanton acts of the Defendant in one or more of the following particulars, to wit:

(a) In failing to keep a proper lookout for traffic in general and in particular, the Plaintiff;

(b) In failing to timely apply brakes so as to avoid crashing with the vehicle being driven by Plaintiff;

(c) In evidencing an utter disregard for the safety of the public in general and in particular, the Plaintiff;

(d) In traveling too fast for conditions;

(e) In colliding with the Plaintiff's vehicle; and

(f) In failing to use that degree of care that an ordinary and prudent person would have used under the same or similar circumstances.

7. That as a direct and proximate result of the negligent and/or reckless, willful, and wanton acts of the Defendant, Plaintiff has suffered serious painful and personal injuries. That as a result of her injuries, the Plaintiff has been forced to undergo medical treatment and has incurred medical expenses. That as a result of the Plaintiff's injuries, she has been unable to engage in her normal pursuits of happiness, has suffered emotional distress, and mental anguish, all to his great damage.

WHEREFORE, the Plaintiffs pray judgment against the Defendant as follows:

A. For actual damages found to be just and equitable within the discretion of the fact finder;

B. For punitive damages if proven by clear and convincing evidence;

C. For the costs and disbursements of this action;

D. For prejudgment interest at the rate authorized by the South Carolina Supreme Court and S.C. Code Ann. § 34-31-20 (B); and

E. For such other and further relief as this Court may deem just and proper.

Are you getting all your vitamins? How to revamp your diet

(StatePoint) Getting all the vitamins and nutrients you need each day is one of the most important things you can do to feel your best.

The good news is that you don't need to devote hours each week to meal prep to ensure you're healthfully getting essential vitamins. As you revamp your diet, here are a few things to keep in mind:

- Don't follow fads: When it comes to your wellness, it's best to rely on basic science, not the latest fad diets or sports drinks and supplements that rely on added sugars, fillers, preservatives, artificial flavors, sweeteners, dyes, and negatives. Look for products that transparently list all their ingredients.

- Drink your vitamins: Did you know that liquids are the most bioavailable form for your body to absorb nutrients? For complete health on-the-go, consider drinking your vitamins. One effective solution is Drink Nutrient, which offers single-serve stick packs that make it easy to get the nutrients and essential vitamins you need. Among its offerings is Vitamin Coffee, a natural health enhancer and energy booster made from 100 percent Colombian Arabica coffee that offers 50 percent of your daily essential vitamins in each serving. Served hot or cold, it's a good choice for anyone who needs a caffeine boost without the crash. Or, to get 100 percent of your daily essential vitamins and 610 mg of electrolytes in one go, consider Vitamin Booster+, which contains real fruit juice and is only 15 calories per serving.

- De-stress: Too much stress can compromise your body's ability to absorb nutrients. So, take steps to relax and unwind. Whether it's through meditation, journaling, cooking or jogging -- discover what hobbies and wellness activities help you reduce your stress levels and be sure to make time for them.

- Refuel wisely: If you hit the gym frequently, you likely have tried one or two sports drinks and know how important it is to refuel quickly and wisely after a workout. For optimal high performance, consider upgrading your drink of choice. For muscle repair, mental focus, 13 essential vitamins as well as double the electrolytes of leading sports drinks, Liquid Nutrient has a potassium-to-sodium ratio intended for high-quality hydration.

- Maximize meals: To maximize meals, make sure the bulk of the calories you consume are not "empty." Empty calories, such as added sugars and solid fats, contain little to no nutritional value. Fill up on dark leafy vegetables, berries, nuts, seeds and good-for-you fats like avocado and salmon, while avoiding chips, cakes and other junk foods.

Don't let your busy lifestyle get in the way of ensuring you're getting all the nutrients you need to feel your best. With new tools, it is easier than ever to revamp your diet for optimal nutrition.

Husband Starting Radiation Treatment

DEAR DR. ROACH: My husband is about to start radiation treatment for stage one cancer on his vocal chord. Does radiation negatively affect the immune system the same way chemotherapy does? Should I be looking out for people who don't vaccinate? — H.T.

ANSWER: Radiation can affect the immune system when it is given to large areas of the body, since the immune system cells are largely sensitive to radiation. Whole-body radiation rarely is used now, except in people planning for bone-marrow transplant. By contrast, localized radiation does not adversely affect the immune system to anywhere near the degree that chemotherapy can, since the bone marrow, where the immune system cells live, is diffuse throughout the large bones of the body.

As far as avoiding unvaccinated individuals, people who are unvaccinated and who are healthy do not pose a risk. It is in an outbreak of vaccine-preventable disease (there have been localized outbreaks of measles and mumps in the past year, and there are seasonal outbreaks of influenza) that unvaccinated people are much more likely to be infectious. So anyone with immune system disease (such as chemotherapy or whole-body radiation) should avoid people with potentially infectious illness. Caregivers of people with severe immune disease certainly should be immunized according to current guidelines. Even elderly people whose caregivers are immunized for flu get flu less than those whose caregivers are not.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I know women who have had double mastectomies in order to reduce the risk of cancer. It seems extreme, but I guess it depends on the evaluation of risk. Are prophylactic hysterectomies done for similar reasons? It used to be routinely done when a woman had passed her reproductive years. I'm interested in your take on this. Will health insurance cover these types of surgeries, and if not, how expensive are they? — S.B.

ANSWER: Prophylactic mastectomies — that is, surgery to remove the breasts in order to avert a breast cancer diagnosis — are a reasonable choice for some women at very high risk of breast cancer, especially those with a family history of breast cancer who have an identifiable genetic predisposition, such as one of the BRCA gene mutations. This decision should be made carefully and in consultation with her doctors, usually an oncologist and a genetic counselor. I have very little experience with this in my own patients, fortunately, but I understand that in the case of women with very high genetic risk, it usually is covered by insurance, if it is the consensus of the treating physicians and the patient that she should proceed.

Hysterectomy — the removal of a uterus — is not done routinely today, the way it was decades ago. They are removed for disease, either benign or malignant. However, the removal of both ovaries and Fallopian tubes, called a bilateral oophorectomy and salpingectomy, is performed in some women at high risk for ovarian cancer. In fact, women with the BRCA mutations may consider both a prophylactic double mastectomy and a prophylactic bilateral oophorectomy and salpingectomy, since BRCA mutations increase risk of breast cancer and ovarian cancer (as well as other cancers).

The cost of surgery in the United States varies dramatically depending on where it is done, but in general it is very expensive.

Organizations launch COVID-19 Emergency Supply portal to get organizations the supplies they need

Greenville - A collaboration including SCMEP, the SC Hospital Association, the SC Department of Commerce and SCBIO has resulted in the expedited launch of a new online South Carolina Emergency Supply Collaborative web portal.

Located at www.SCCOVID19.org, the portal connects parties in need of essential supplies and equipment with those that can provide it quickly and efficiently. It allows industry and community partners with the ability to quickly produce, source, test, certify or contribute critical medical supplies (such as face shields, gowns, ventilators and masks) to directly connect with the healthcare providers, first responders and members of industry to locate essential supplies in one easy step.

Manufacturers able to expand or pivot their production lines, suppliers and distributors with access to ready-made supplies, organizations able to donate supplies or personal protective equipment (PPE) can identify the supplies and equipment they can offer in the site's central repository. Once quickly reviewed and vetted by a team from the collaborative, organizations in need of the materials will be digitally connected through the portal to secure their desired goods from providers directly.

The need for the portal was identified after members of the collaborative began individually fielding hundreds of calls from organizations in need of such supplies, noted Chuck Spangler, President of the South Carolina Manufacturing Extension Partnership (SCMEP).

"Each of our respective organizations has strong and indelible positions as sources of information, connection and aid to our respective constituencies, so it was logical for those parties - whether hospitals or manufacturers, existing industry or life sciences organizations - to turn to us in time of need," said Mr. Spangler. "After sharing among ourselves the flood of requests we were individually receiving and trying to manage, we determined that a combined approach would offer greatest value and efficiency for our state and its citizens, and the creation of the South Carolina COVID-19 Emergency Supply portal was quickly underway."

The site identifies critical need items as evidenced by industry, healthcare, first responder and governmental audiences across the state, and allows organizations to quickly enter the type of goods they can provide or manufacture, quantities and production capacity, and supply chain needs or requirements. Once entered and vetted by the SCMEP team, inquiring parties seeking the goods will be connected to the providers through the portal. Organizations then conduct transactions and arrange and plan logistics directly.

"This is a joint effort to recruit community partners with ability to quickly source or provide needed medical supplies to support South Carolina's COVID-19 response," said Thornton Kirby, President and CEO of the SC Hospital

Association. "South Carolina's COVID-19 Emergency Supply website will save valuable time and effort in connecting those in need of goods with those who have them... at a time where every minute counts in saving lives and defeating this formidable virus."

The COVID-19 Emergency Supply website will be updated constantly with new information and opportunities to support South Carolina emergency response efforts. It also links directly to individual websites of the four Collaborative partners, which each provides a host of resources, connections and relevant information for businesses and individuals. "We are all in this together, er, and I am proud of the South Carolina business community's continued response to serve our state during this unprecedented time," said SC Secretary of Commerce Bobby Hitt. "The COVID-19 Emergency Supply Collaborative's ability to connect manufacturers, suppliers and other organizations with the front-line medical personnel who need these critical items will serve as a valuable resource."

Organizations and individuals can go online 24/7 to identify critical need items or to note what products they can provide or may need, said Sam Konduros, CEO of SCBIO. "We encourage every member of industry, if you have a product that is needed and which you can provide, produce, test, certify or donate, let us know that right now by completing the simple form on the site. And for organizations in need of such items, let us know that right away so that we can connect you with parties who can help right now."

Pump prices still plunging: OPEC and allies finalize record production cut

Charlotte, N.C. - The plunge at the pump continued last week with North Carolina gas prices falling another 5 cents to a $1.71 average on Monday, April 13th and South Carolina gas prices falling another 4 cents to $1.65. How much lower gas prices go will depend on how the market responds to a historic deal made by OPEC and its oil producing allies over the weekend.

"The OPEC deal shouldn't cause gas prices to suddenly spike, but it will affect how low they can potentially go," said Tiffany Wright, AAA spokesperson. "Wholesale gas prices suggest that averages in the Carolinas could possibly reach $1.50 or below, but that won't happen if oil prices gain upward momentum."

On Sunday, April 12th, OPEC and its allies agreed to cut oil production by 9.7 million barrels per day - the single largest production cut in history. Although this effectively ends a price war that broke out between Saudi Arabia and Russia, which caused a 25% reduction in oil prices last month, it is likely to not have an immediate impact on pump prices. This deal is an attempt to help eliminate supply surpluses and strengthen the price of crude. The downward trend continues as the effects of COVID-19 impacts the global economy and forces Americans to stay off the road.

In total, oil prices are down 56 percent since February 21. During that time, the price of crude plummeted from $53 per barrel to $23 per barrel. At $1.86, Monday's national average is 6-cents less than last week, 44-cents cheaper than a month ago and nearly $1 less than a year ago. Gasoline demand has decreased 44%, as residents self-isolate at home due to stay-at-home orders. The longer demand is down, the more crude and gasoline supplies will build. Once the stay-at-home orders are lifted, it will take some time for the market to stabilize.

Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System statement on fiscal challenges during COVID-19

COVID-19 is taking a heavy economic toll on every health system in the country, including Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System (SRHS).

For the past several weeks, the healthcare system has experienced significant volume drops in elective surgeries, elective procedures, diagnostic testing, ambulatory and emergency center visits, along with paying markedly higher pricing for COVID-19 related supplies. This has led to large financial losses, and these challenges are expected to continue until early June, mirroring the anticipated DHEC COVID-19 impact forecast.

Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System CEO Bruce Holstien said the system has already adjusted by flexing hours, cutting non-labor expenses and reducing the salaries of all management.

“The overriding focus is to maintain and support our frontline caregivers while addressing the realities of areas with low to no service demand,” Holstien said. “These are non-permanent and temporary measures that are anticipated ending no later than June 6. We will get past this, recover and move forward ever stronger as a community and as a healthcare system.”

In addition to cutting non-labor expenses and management salary reductions, Spartanburg Regional is using a variety of options including redeployment of staff, temporary furloughs and flexed work hours to mitigate the effects of reduced volumes.

“Spartanburg Regional has worked diligently to ensure care delivery and the safety of our team. Leadership has been very concerned about the health system’s economic realities and minimizing impact to our associates and physicians; but these are unprecedented times,” said Robert E. Gregory Jr., chairman of the Apella Health Board of Trustees, a 501(c)3 not-for-profit management company that provides oversight to Spartanburg Regional. “All these necessary steps in the fight against COVID-19 have led to sharp declines in the number of procedures and hospital occupancy rates, compelling us to increase our temporary actions.”

Last week, the Spartanburg Regional Foundation designated $2M to establish a COVID-19 Fund to support the needs of SRHS staff and patient care during this difficult period. To donate, please visit RegionalFoundation.com.

Fun outdoor activities can still be found for the family this spring, despite COVID-19

(StatePoint) The sun is shining, flowers are blooming, and you’re probably ready to get outside. Spring offers new opportunities for outdoor fun for the entire family. In fact, it is the perfect time to create a bucket list of warm weather activities for the season ahead.

Here are a few ideas to get your list started and help you dress the part:

Visit a Playground

Between busy schedules and extracurricular activities, it’s important to enjoy some quality family time and some fresh air, and a quick trip to your local playground at a favorite park is the perfect place for it.

Shoes to try: Throw on a pair of Converse Chuck Taylor All Star shoes for a laid-back style that will effortlessly take you from one family activity to the next.

Ride a Bike

Take a bike ride to explore your neighborhood or local trails from a new perspective. Sunshine and exercise are sure to put an end to any lingering winter blues.

Shoes to try: An all-white Adidas sneaker is a functional and on-trend choice to top off your athleisure ensemble this spring.

Root for the Home Team

Whether you’re a die-hard fan of your local team or just there for some outdoor fun, round up the family and check out a local sporting event. Revered as “America’s favorite pastime,” baseball kicks off in the spring and is always a good source of family-friendly entertainment.

Shoes to try: For observers, the options are endless -- and you can’t go wrong with a fun pair of checkboard Vans or brightly colored Crocs, which are available in men’s, women’s and children’s sizing.

“A day of family fun shouldn’t include multiple wardrobe changes,” says Laryssa Grant, women’s buyer for national family footwear retailer Rack Room Shoes. “Brands have made sure that staying on-trend and comfortable throughout the day is as easy as ever with a variety of fun styles available this spring.”

For a one-stop-shopping experience and shoe trends for the family, visit Rack Room Shoes in-store or online at RackRoomShoes.com.

With the right gear and an action-packed bucket list, you can get a jump-start on your spring in style.

Susan G. Komen action fund helps breast cancer patients impacted by COVID-19

(StatePoint) Rising unemployment, mandatory stay-at-home orders, and an overburdened health care system are causing a perfect storm for breast cancer patients who have concerns or need care, according to the experts at Susan G. Komen.

“People who have been impacted by breast cancer or who are concerned that they may have breast cancer need help getting the care they need now more than ever,” says Paula Schneider, CEO of Susan G. Komen.

That’s why Komen has established a COVID-19 Action Fund to provide people and organizations an opportunity to support the unique needs of breast cancer patients during this health and economic crisis.

New Risks

Breast cancer doesn’t break for a global pandemic. It is estimated that in 2020 there will be more than 279,000 new cases of invasive breast cancer in the U.S., according to the American Cancer Society. Unfortunately, some of the common therapies used to treat breast cancer, like chemotherapy, can cause immune systems to be compromised both during and for a period after treatment ends, putting patients at higher risk for getting the novel coronavirus disease.

How People Can Help

Komen remains committed to doing whatever it takes to save lives by supporting those most vulnerable within the breast cancer community. The Komen COVID-19 Action Fund supports urgent needs among the breast cancer community during this health and economic crisis. Donors to the fund ensure important services continue for those in need, including:

- Komen’s Breast Care and Clinical Trials Helpline, which is receiving record-high call volume
- Komen’s Treatment Assistance program, which provides financial assistance to patients going through treatment
- Guiding patients through difficult decisions and providing psychosocial support from oncology social workers
- Komen’s advocacy for breast cancer patients and their needs among policy makers
- Funding lifesaving

research and clinical trials to discover new treatments

“Whether it’s providing information, finding alternative resources or helping people stay in treatment by providing financial assistance to help remove barriers to care, we are here to help. But we can only be here for patients if we have funds available to deploy in assisting them,” says Schneider.

To learn more or donate, visit coronavirus.komen.org.

What Patients Should Know

For people looking for support, Komen’s Breast Care Helpline can provide information, social support and help with coping strategies related to anxiety or concerns during these uncertain times. Calls to the helpline are answered by trained, caring staff members in English or Spanish, Monday through Friday from 9:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. ET. The helpline can be reached by phone at 1-877-GO-

KOMEN (465-6636), or by email at helpline@komen.org

The experts at Komen noted that while they support delaying routine screening during this health crisis for healthy women of average risk who are not displaying warning signs of cancer, they strongly encourage people to know what is normal for them, and to report to their health care provider any changes. The warning signs for breast cancer are not the same for all women. The most common signs are changes to the look or feel of the breast, and a full list of warning signs for breast cancer can be found at komen.org. Contact a doctor if you notice any change in your breast.

The COVID-19 pandemic is new, unprecedented and confusing, but for those with breast cancer, there are additional challenges. During this time of uncertainty, no one should feel alone. New resources are helping breast cancer patients connect with the information, care and support they need.
