Upstate tabs Hoppes as head cheerleading coach

The University of South Carolina Upstate has named Lynsey Hoppes as the Spartans new head cheerleading coach. Senior associate athletic director for external operations Lenny Mathis made the announcement Monday.

Hoppes, who holds two bachelors degrees from Clemson University (Biological Sciences '17, Nursing via the Accelerated Second Degree Nursing Program '19) cheered for the Tigers from 2013-17, including the 2016 football National Championship season. Prior to Clemson, she cheered for one season at East Carolina University. By day (or night), she serves as a registered nurse as Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System. She also has taught at a number of cheerleading camps Georgia, South and North Carolina. Lynsey will be joined by her husband Peyton who will assist the program during the year as well. Peyton was also a member of the Tigers cheerleading program for three years.

The couple resides in Spartanburg and – to add to an already exciting time – will welcome their first child this fall.

Spartanburg Regional now offering no-cost, no-order COVID-19 testing in Spartanburg Spartanburg Regional Healthcare System is now offering no-cost, no-order testing at its COVID-19 testing facility in Spartanburg.

Those seeking COVID-19 testing can visit the former Spartanburg Chrysler Dodge Jeep Ram Dealership, located at 1035 N. Church St., and have a specimen collected without leaving their vehicles, regardless of whether they are experiencing symptoms.

The Spartanburg testing site is open 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A testing location is also anticipated to open in August near Pelham Medical Center in Greer. These sites are in addition to pop-up testing events held throughout the area in partnership with the S.C. Department of Health and Environmental Control and other community partners.

For more information about COVID-19, visit SpartanburgRegional.com/Coronavirus.

Spartanburg County Bar Association holds annual meeting, elects officers

The annual meeting of the Spartanburg County Bar Association was held at the Spartanburg Memorial Auditorium on June 25.

Officers elected for the upcoming year are Charles Edwards, President; Andrew Poliakoff, Vice President; Edwin Haskell, Executive Committeeman; and Ginger Goforth, Treasurer. Pat Anderson will remain a member of the Executive Committee replacing Wesley Stoddard as immediate Past President.

The Claude Taylor Distinguished Service Award was presented to attorney J. Edwin McDonnell, recently retired as Deputy Director of Litigation and Training of Piedmont Legal Services. The Claude Taylor Award is presented annually to an attorney for outstanding humanitarian service.

Attorney Chelsea Rikard of A Business Law Firm was presented the C. Bruce Littlejohn Young Lawyer of the Year award. This award is to recognize outstanding contributions of young lawyers to the practice of law and to the Spartanburg community.

Dorothy Earle, Register of Deeds for Spartanburg County, was presented the E.C. Burnett III award. The E.C. Burnett, III award recognizes non-attorneys whose work has improved the legal system in Spartanburg County.

This year over 90 high school students from Spartanburg and Cherokee counties participated in the J. Mark Hayes, II Law Day Essay Contest.

Judge Hayes presented the overall winner award and a $500 check to Emma Saunders, a Byrnes High School student of Ms. Susanne Cash.

The subject of the essays concerned the 19th amendment to the US Constitution which provided for Women's Suffrage.

This is the 11th year of the contest.

Upward Sports announces new Executive Director

Upward Sports, the leading youth sports ministry choice for thousands of U.S. churches, announced Kevin Drake as the new Executive Director of the organization. In his role, Drake will lead Upward Sports' strategic ministry vision, overseeing organizational growth and expansion.

"We are excited and honored to have Kevin leading our dynamic teams. His heart for equipping church leaders to reach their communities with the gospel of Christ is aligned with our ministry," said Drew Provence, Partner Engagement Manager. "During such a unique time in our nation, we believe Kevin's strategic organizational leadership will empower Upward to really walk alongside church leaders as they grapple with complex issues and unique ministry needs in today's ever changing environment."

Upward Sports is currently a partner and consultant to more than 1,200 churches across the United States, supporting them in their unique ministry goals and enabling them to bring gospel-centered sports experiences to children, families and communities. Under Drake's leadership, Upward will expand upon this role, offering innovative resources, tailored sports experiences and individual consultation to better meet the unique needs of churches around the country.

Kevin Drake comes to Upward Sports with an extensive background in organizational leadership and communications. Before joining Upward, he served as the Regional Publisher of the Western Carolinas for Gannett Media. Kevin is a proven leader in digital innovation with unique skills in connecting people to relevant information that will enhance their lives. In previous roles, he served as publisher of a newspaper in Lakeland, Florida and Hendersonville North Carolina. Kevin has also served on the boards of many nonprofit organizations including multiple chambers of commerce, Rotary, Salvation Army, and United Way, as well as the boards for the South Carolina and Florida Press Associations. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Business Management from Gardner Webb University. Personally, Kevin is active in his local church and resides with his wife and four children in Spartanburg. He is an avid sports fan, particularly of college football and basketball.

"Churches everywhere are facing unprecedented challenges and obstacles to ministry. And we, at Upward Sports, want to be in it with them every step of the way," said Kevin Drake. "We fully believe this unique time will yield unbelievable opportunities for ministry and we want churches across the nation to have everything they need to step in and care for hurting communities and isolated families."

Drake continued, "Sports are a powerful and unifying tool that people of all backgrounds, socioeconomic situations, religions, and ethnicities can appreciate. For twenty five years, Upward Sports has been a trusted partner to churches seeking to leverage the power of sports to reach their communities, and I'm excited to be a part of what God is doing through this ministry."

Upward walks alongside churches as they pursue their gospel-centered missions, equipping them with innovative resources and helping them overcome challenges as they bring transformational sports experiences to their communities.

We all scream for ice cream

It's hot, and like many of you, one of my favorite ways to cool off is with a bowl of ice cream. Vanilla ice cream continues to be America's flavor of choice. Ice cream's origins are known to reach back as far as the second century B.C., although no specific date of origin or inventor has been indisputably credited with its discovery.

In 1874, the American soda-fountain shop and the profession of the "soda jerk" emerged with the invention of the ice-cream soda. In response to religious criticism for eating "sinfully" rich ice-cream sodas on Sundays, ice-cream merchants left out the carbonated water and invented the ice-cream "Sunday" in the late 1890s. The name was eventually changed to "sundae" to remove any connection with the Sabbath.

Today, ice-cream machines make it easy for home cooks to prepare their favorite flavor of this delicious, frozen dessert. Try this wonderful ice-cream recipe, and beat the heat with a frozen treat!

FROZEN CUSTARD ICE CREAM

Don't let a favorite homemade ice cream using with raw eggs cramp your style with a possible food-borne illness. Substitute the traditional method with this cooked custard ice-cream recipe and variations from the American Egg Board.

6 eggs
2 cups milk
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups whipping cream
1 tablespoon vanilla

1. In medium saucepan, beat together eggs, milk, sugar and salt. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is thick enough to coat a metal spoon with a thin film and reaches at least 160 F. Cool quickly by setting pan in ice or cold water and stirring for a few minutes. Cover and refrigerate until thoroughly chilled, at least one hour.

2. When ready to freeze, pour chilled custard, whipping cream and vanilla into 1-gallon ice-cream freezer container. Freeze, according to manufacturer's directions, until firm. Makes 1 1/2 to 2 quarts.

VARIATIONS

Banana Nut: Reduce vanilla to 1 1/2 teaspoons. Cook and cool as above. Stir three large ripe bananas, mashed, and 1/2 cup chopped, toasted pecans into custard mixture. Freeze as above.

Chocolate: Add three squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened chocolate to egg mixture. Cook, cool and freeze as above.

Strawberry: Omit vanilla. Cook and cool as above. Partially freeze. Add 2 cups sweetened, crushed fresh strawberries. Complete freezing.

Call Me MISTER transforms summer leadership institute into yearlong series in response to COVID-19, national protests

By Michael Staton, College of Education, Clemson University

2020 was off to a great start for Clemson University's storied Call Me MISTER® program. In February, the College of Education's program was recognized on the floor of both the South Carolina Senate and House of Representatives as part of its 20th anniversary celebration. MISTERS from every participating institution convened for a reception later that day celebrating the legacy of the program joined by educational leaders from across the state.

The next big item on the anniversary celebration agenda was the Call Me MISTER Summer Leadership Institute, which has become a key piece of the program experience for students over the years. Students and site coordinators from every participating institution get together to hear from guest speakers, network with one another and learn valuable lessons about the part they'll play as change agents in education.

The institute is also when the investiture ceremony takes place and graduating MISTERS receive their signature black blazer. It's far more than an article of clothing. It's a major milestone. It's the peak of a mountain ascended before a MISTER moves on to fulfill their commitment to teach in a public school.

However, those students have yet to don the blazer in front of their peers, and what was to be a weeklong institute in late June became a single speaking event held via Zoom. According to Roy Jones, executive director of Call Me MISTER, 2020 had other plans.

"Just like everything else we had planned for our MISTERS, those blazers will arrive, just maybe not in the timeframe we originally planned," Jones said. "COVID-19 meant we had to adapt, so while an abbreviated summer leadership institute was disappointing, it has changed into something we're very excited about."

The late June speaking event featured Dr. Sandra McGuire, director emerita of the center for academic success and retired assistant vice chancellor and professor of chemistry at Louisiana State University. McGuire is a metacognition expert who has successfully closed the achievement gap for students of color. The online event held via Zoom was well received by students, so it proved to be a trial run for an entirely new, expanded version of the institute.

The Call Me MISTER Leadership Series was born from this event and the recognized need to convene MISTERS in an online format. MISTER leaders wanted to take advantage of Zoom to cover topics ranging from practical instruction to leadership values, so it quickly became clear that it could not—and should not—be relegated to the summer.

According to Mark Joseph, program coordinator for Call Me MISTER and assistant professor at Anderson University, the schedule lasting into next summer is not completely filled out yet, but that is by design. MISTER leadership want to first "take the pulse" of current students in their home areas to learn what they want out of an ongoing, online series.

"There are many conversations around race going on at the moment all across this country, and we've always seen that context is one of the most important things to get right when discussing anything with our students," Joseph said. "It's now more important than ever to have future educators understand their place in history and the responsibility they will bear as educators moving forward."

Protests revolving around race, police brutality, statues of historical figures and building names have obviously emerged as topics that students want to explore and seek guidance on. Jones and Joseph admit that if there was ever a time to provide MISTERS with context, now would be it.

Dr. Alfred Tatum, dean of the University of Illinois/Chicago's College of Education, will lead off the Call Me MISTER Leadership Series in September. Tatum is a nationally known scholar for "reorienting how we think about literacy" in the language development and understanding of Black boys. He will be addressing the MISTERS on this theme and will pull information from his most recent book, "Literacy Development of Black Boys: An Advanced Literacy Perspective." Tatum was instrumental in establishing Call Me MISTER on his campus three years ago and continues to be a champion in promoting the mission to diversify the teacher workforce.

Joseph said that the key to tackling these sensitive topics for students is to clearly tie them to the mission of MISTER, just as Tatum will surely do in September. He said it would be misguided to try to educate students as a reaction to world events; instead, they need to understand those events and the bearing they will inevitably have on classrooms. With that knowledge, MISTERS won't just be able to recognize problems but come up with solutions.

"These conversations just make clearer what our role as educators needs to be," Joseph said. "If we call ourselves MISTERS but we're not willing to educate and empower, then we're doing ourselves a disservice. We use cohort meetings and we'll use this leadership series as a reminder and encouraging space for us, because it's easy to get swept away with larger conversations and frustration and hurt. Let's remind one another what our role is in this."

In a time of uncertainty in the future of higher education budgets and enrollment, this unwavering focus is why MISTER has only seen increased interest from institutions looking to start Call Me MISTER programs. Jones said that the pandemic has certainly disrupted site visits and consultations, but Zoom meetings and online site visits have occurred, nonetheless.

Jones said that a teacher shortage will still be present if not worse whenever the pandemic ends, and institutions will still prioritize diversifying the teacher workforce as student demographics continue to change. Current social crises only make the need to prioritize teacher diversity clearer for teacher preparation institutions, and Call Me MISTER's 20-year track record of positive impact and results is hard to ignore.

Jones can't help but see the news these days and imagine where the stories of so many people intersect. This upcoming school year, he imagines a future victim of police violence sitting in an elementary classroom. On one side of this student may sit another future victim, and on the other a future perpetrator of violence. In that same class may sit a future police officer tasked with protecting them all. With MISTER in mind, Jones thinks about what they all might have in common.

"Some of these students may be missing that crucial adult role model, but they will all have teachers in front of them," Jones said. "The masses won't be able to sit down and talk to a therapist about what's going on in the world. That would be great, but it's not realistic. If you have instability in a community, the next best thing is a teacher, and our program aims to continue positioning MISTERS to stand in the gap between vulnerable students and the outside world. The way we do that is preparing these teachers in the context of the world around them."

Call Me MISTER works to increase the pool of available teachers from more diverse backgrounds, particularly among the lowest-performing elementary schools. What started as a single program at Clemson University is now at 25 participating institutions in nine states. Ninety percent of students in the Call Me MISTER program come from South Carolina public schools; 85 percent of graduates are still teaching in them, often in Title I schools. If MISTERS leave the classroom, it's usually to become administrators as 36 alumni have. Of the 278 MISTERS who have graduated from the program in South Carolina, 42 have been named Teachers of the Year by their schools.

How to borrow smart for college

(StatePoint) It's no secret college can be expensive, and families are often faced with finding creative ways to cover the costs. Whether borrowing student loans or parent loans has always been part of your family's plan or it is suddenly being considered due to new financial circumstances, there is good news: several smart strategies can help you save money.

- Automate payments: Automating payments not only gives you the peace of mind that comes with knowing that your bills will be paid on time, every time, but some lenders even offer interest rate reductions alongside this option.

- Choose a shorter repayment term: Some private lenders allow you to customize the length of your repayment term. If it's in your monthly budget to do so, select a shorter term. While monthly payments will likely be higher, you'll save in the long run.

- Start early: Consider making monthly payments on the loan while the student is still in school.

Payments may be deferred during this time, but the loan may still be accruing interest that will be added to your loan balance. Check with your lender. Use a student loan calculator, like the one from College Ave Student Loans to see how a small monthly amount can make a big difference.

- Go above and beyond:

When possible, make additional payments on your loan. Whether you choose to do this monthly or in lump sums after special occasions (e.g. tax refunds and graduation gifts), this can be a good way to get ahead of your repayment schedule and reduce interest charges. Just be sure your lender doesn't charge a fee for doing so.

- Borrow federal first: Borrow federal student loans in the student's name first. They offer low fixed interest rates to all borrowers, not just those with excellent credit scores. Plus, they offer special benefits like income-driven repayment and loan forgiveness options not typically offered on private loans

- Shop around: If federal student loans don't adequately cover college costs, private student loans can fill the gap. Be sure to comparison shop to learn which lender will offer you a good interest rate, as well as multiple repayment options that fit your family's budget. When shopping, look for a pre-qualification tool offered on the lender's site that will share what rates you can expect without a hard check on your credit.

There are a number of private student and private parent loan options available at great rates from College Ave Student Loans, which offers streamlined customer service features and cost-saving perks, such as an interest rate reduction when you automate payments and no penalties for additional payments made. Their easy, transparent loan application process offers an instant credit decision, so there is no period of uncertainty. More tips, resources, guides and financial expert advice to help you navigate the financial road to college can be found by visiting, collegeave.com.

"The pandemic has created some uncertainty for many families," says Joe DePaulo, co-founder and CEO of College Ave Student Loans. "However, there are steps you can take now to create a solid plan to cover your upcoming college costs."

Motorists urged to 'slow down, move over' following recent crashes involving tow truck operators

Charlotte, N.C. – Following recent crashes involving tow truck operators in the area, AAA Carolinas of The Auto Club Group is urging motorists to "Slow Down, Move Over" to help protect emergency workers and law enforcement who are providing assistance to those in need on the roadside.

"Our roadside assistance crews, law enforcement and other emergency personnel risk their lives every day when they pull over alongside moving traffic to help someone in need and we must do our part to protect them," said George Figueiredo, Vice President of Member Services of The Auto Club Group in the Carolinas. "Most people aren't aware that the towing industry is 15 more times deadlier than all other private industries combined and we need to slow down and move over because it's not only the right thing to do - it's the law."

AAA is in the business of rescuing millions of stranded motorists across the country each year. Recent data reveals 23 roadside workers and first responders – one every other week – lose their life at the roadside, while hundreds more are injured while assisting motorists.

The Move Over law requires motorists – if it is safe to do so – move a lane over for emergency vehicles, utility workers and law enforcement stopped alongside the road. While all fifty states have Move Over laws, fewer than 30 percent of Americans are aware that the laws exist, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

As part of AAA's commitment to urge motorists to "Slow Down, Move Over," a handful of AAA service vehicles have been wrapped with the awareness message in the Carolinas.

"We hope motorists will see our message as we service the Carolinas and that it will resonate with them to move over for tow operators, law enforcement and other emergency vehicles," added Figueiredo.

To protect roadside workers and improve highway safety, AAA offers these precautionary tips:

- * Always remain alert. Avoid distractions and focus on the task of driving.

- * Maintain a visual lead of everything going on 20 to 30 seconds ahead of you. This gives you time to see problems ahead and change lanes and adjust speed accordingly.

- * Emergencies can occur anywhere on the road. When you see flashing lights, slow down and prepare well in advance to change lanes. Allow others to merge into your lane when necessary.

- * Don't follow semi-trucks or other large vehicles too closely. If a truck moves into a left-hand lane, don't speed around the right side. They are changing lanes for a reason; be prepared to change lanes yourself.

- * When road conditions are slick, don't make sudden lane changes which can cause an uncontrollable skid. Change lanes early and move over gradually.

If you are unable to move over, slow down to a safe speed taking into consideration that you are approaching a workspace where pedestrians are present.

Gas Prices Continue to Decrease in Carolinas as Demand Remains Low

Charlotte, N.C. – Motorists in the Carolinas experienced another week of decreasing prices at the pump as demand continues to remain low across the country.

"Right now we're seeing that gas prices are still pushing cheaper in the Carolinas," said Tiffany Wright, AAA spokesperson. "Prices will more than likely continue to fluctuate throughout the rest of the summer due to COVID-19 concerns."

North Carolina made the nation's top 10 largest weekly changes with an average of $1.97, seeing a four cent decrease on the week. This average is 10 cents cheaper than a month ago and 57 cents cheaper than a year ago. South Carolina made the nation's top 10 least expensive markets with an average of $1.89, seeing a three cent decrease on the week. This average is 5 cents cheaper than a month ago and 53 cents cheaper than a year ago.
