Chapman Cultural Center relaunches its downtown programming

On August 1st, Chapman Cultural Center relaunches its downtown programming, bringing the best musicians and artists of Spartanburg.

During the month of August, from Wednesday through Saturday, 66 Spartanburg musicians and artists will take to the streets of the downtown cultural district to showcase their talents in the performing arts and a variety of musical genres.

Downtown Programming helps create a vibrant cultural experience that increases pedestrian traffic in the downtown area and helps promote local businesses and our economy.

Street named honoring Jayne C. McQueen, Mobile Meals President and CEO

A ceremony was held on July 30th to unveil the street sign honoring Jayne McQueen, President and CEO of Mobile Meals of 40 years. City Council approved the honorary street name on a portion of Chestnut Street from Henry Street to Kennedy Street.

This celebration was an opportunity to honor a special community leader who has guided the nonprofit meal service for 40 plus years. Many roads throughout Spartanburg County are traveled at one time or another by a volunteer delivering a meal. Jayne McQueen has been honored with numerous awards through the years including The Order of the Palmetto and this is another way to remind ourselves of her passion to feed those in need and say thank you for making a difference in the lives of others.

Spartanburg man earns East Tennessee State University degree at spring commencement

Johnson City, TN - East Tennessee State University conferred nearly 1,900 degrees in two spring commencement ceremonies, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, on May 5. Robert Dalton Bryant, of Spartanburg, earned a Bachelor of Science degree.

Internationally recognized commercial and fine artist to exhibit in Spartanburg

College-level art teacher, freelance illustrator, and poster designer Mike Massengale of Greenville will exhibit a collection of mixed media-on-canvas-and-paper artwork at West Main Artists Co-op (WMAC) through August 24 based on the theme "Music in the Street."

This extremely colorful, contemporary, and impressionistic collection of about 20 works of art that mostly depict musicians playing in casual and energetic environments will be open for free public viewing Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. The exhibit's reception will be on Thursday, Aug. 16, 5 - 9 p.m.

For more information about "Music in the Street," Massengale, or West Main Artists Co-op, please visit online: WestMainArtists.org.

Burkhart named to GSSM Board

Columbia - The South Carolina Governor's School for Science & Mathematics (GSSM) Foundation recently announced new board members for the 2018-2021 Board of Directors term. Dr. Brian M. Burkhart, Commercial Director, SiVance LLC, of Spartanburg, was named to the Board.

The GSSM Foundation supports GSSM by giving voice to its needs, providing supplemental funds to augment its programs, and informing the public of its accomplishments and contributions to the quality of life and economic prosperity of South Carolina. The Foundation's core objectives include fundraising, marketing, and alumni relations.

The five new Foundation board members join 21 current members from across the state. Visit www.scgssm.org to see the full GSSM Board of Directors list.

AAA Carolinas warns against In My Feelings Challenge

Charlotte, N.C. - AAA Carolinas is urging motorists to avoid partaking in the #InMyFeelingsChallenge while operating a motor vehicle.

The challenge, which involves dancing alongside a moving vehicle while Drake's song "In My Feelings" plays was started in June by social media comedian Shiggy. Since then, there have been multiple injury reports from partakers falling out of a moving vehicle or getting hit by passing traffic.

AAA Carolinas warns that this trend is dangerous for all parties involved, including those doing the dance in the street as traffic flies by, those recording it on their phone while also attempting to drive and those getting out of a moving vehicle. The distractions created by the In My Feelings Challenge are endless and come with severe consequences. Those caught participating in this global phenomenon could face legal action for those caught participating. For example, in Florida, violators face a $1000 fine for exiting a moving vehicle.

At Spartanburg Regional Pediatric Rehabilitation Services, play is incorporated into occupational, speech and physical therapy.

Learning through play

By Jessica Pickens

Children learn through play: colors, shapes, turn taking, developing logic and communicating with others.

Play also helps children through rehabilitation. At Spartanburg Regional Pediatric Rehabilitation Services, play is incorporated into occupational, speech and physical therapy.

"Play is important. In the adult world, you can tell a person to do 10 reps in therapy to get them better and back to their job," said Sarah Callahan, pediatric physical therapist. "For kids, their job is play. If we can turn games into a function, kids don't see it as therapy, they see it as fun."

To make therapy even more fun for their patients, Spartanburg Regional Pediatric Rehab created summer theme weeks, which started at the beginning of June and ends before school starts. There is a new theme every two weeks with games and activities to match.

"During Space Week, patients walked with moon shoes to work on balance and coordination," Callahan said. "We had a space shuttle repair station where they wore gloves and had to repair the spaceship with screws to work on fine motor skills."

This is the second year Pediatric Rehab held the summer theme weeks for patients. Callahan and occupational therapist Rebecca Carver developed the idea in 2017 to help children reach their therapy goals by incorporating more fun and games into sessions.

"The kids come dressed in costume or in character for each theme," said Sharon Caston, manager of Pediatric Rehab. "The therapists create each activity to target physical, occupational and speech therapy skills." "These theme weeks have become very popular among patients, parents and staff."

This year, camp themes include space, waterworks, outdoor games, tastes around the world, the wild west, and pirates.

"Play encourages exploration, problem-solving, and making relationships between objects, things or concepts," Carver said. "It also develops strength and coordination, encourages social engagement, exposes children to words/sounds, and supports emotional well-being."

Here are some ways rehabilitation is turned into play at this year's summer camp:

Space shuttle repair

Occupational therapy: Fine motor control, bilateral coordination, visual motor integration, and motor planning

Physical therapy: Standing balance, balance on unstable surface

Speech therapy: Color identification, vocabulary and direction following

Alphabet ping-pong fishing

Occupational therapy: Fine motor coordination, sequencing, tactile sensory play, and visual scanning

Physical therapy: Standing balance and single leg stance

Speech therapy: Letter recognition, counting, direction following, quantitative concepts, and rhyming words

Sidewalk chalk drawing

Occupational therapy: Sequencing, motor planning, visual motor integration, coordination and direction following

Physical therapy: Jumping, ambulation, coordination and motor planning

Speech therapy: Sequencing, direction following and retelling

Chopstick race with marshmallows

Occupational therapy: Fine motor control, hand/finger strengthening, and visual motor integration

Physical therapy: Ambulation, squat to floor and stand back up, and dual tasks

Speech therapy: Following directions and quantitative concepts

Horse obstacle race

Occupational therapy: Bilateral coordination, tactile sensory, direction following, and motor planning

Physical therapy: Strengthening, motor planning, and agility

Speech therapy: Following directions, comparative adjectives, prepositions and spatial concepts

Treasure hunt with clues

Occupational therapy: Direction following, geographical orientation, visual motor integration, and sequencing

Physical therapy: Ambulation, skipping/galloping, strengthening, jumping jacks

Speech therapy: Making inferences, identifying described objects, answering "wh" questions

Speech therapy for all activities: imitating speech and functional spontaneous language

Handling a teenager's need to be more responsible

From the American Counseling Association

One of the hardest things for many parents to deal with is their children's demand for more freedoms as they grow into teenagers. After years of making most of your child's decisions and putting your child's needs first, you find yourself confronting a young adult who wants the freedom to face more of the world on his or her own.

On some level, of course, we all recognize that our teenagers need increasing amounts of freedom and responsibility. It's a natural part of the developmental process.

At the same time, we realize there are very real reasons to go slowly in allowing more freedom. News reports and local stories of substance abuse, teen pregnancies, violence and more issues naturally make us worry about the world our teen is facing.

But when we constantly say "no" to our teens' requests, trying to protect and shield them just a little longer, the result is often family conflict, with our teenager pulling away and no longer confiding in us, or perhaps going behind our backs seeking the desired freedom.

While there is no magic cure, there are steps you can take to minimize this conflict. The most important is simply to improve communications.

Sit down with your teen and try to explain your fears and anxieties related to granting increased freedoms. While hearing about your worries may not win your teen's full acceptance or understanding, it can open up meaningful dialogues that can lead to acceptable compromises.

The next step is to go ahead and allow increasing amounts of freedom and responsibilities - opportunities for your teenager to prove he or she really is ready to be more independent.

How much can you trust? How much responsibility should you grant? There are no absolute answers, just judgment calls you have to make based on your teen's personality and past performance.

Yes, mistakes will be made, but also note that most of the time things will turn out just fine. Try to understand that this is also a very difficult and often confusing process for your teen.

Your decisions are still going to worry you and upset your teen at times but when you make a conscious effort to allow increased levels of freedom and responsibility, while also fairly measuring how well your teen handles the changes, you should find that the struggles with your teenager should begin to diminish.

Vice President for Student Affairs Randy Bouknight to begin new chapter of service to Lander University

Greenwood – After 46 years of serving the students of Lander University, H. Randall 'Randy' Bouknight, Vice President for Student Affairs will soon assume a new role of service as a special ambassador for the university.

His new duties will incorporate a blend of community and alumni relations, cultivating new relationships and calling on longstanding friendships to increase support for Lander students. Lander President Richard Cosentino expects Bouknight's new position to be a driving force in the development and success of the university.

"With over 40 years of service at Lander, Randy has extraordinary knowledge and insight into the university and surrounding community," said President Cosentino. "Because of this unique perspective, he is the ideal person to assist us with alumni and community relations."

Decades of Leadership
With a master's degree in College Student Personnel Services from Northwestern State University of Louisiana, Bouknight was fresh out of college when hired in 1972 by Don Herd, Jr., Lander's eighth president.

At the youthful age of 24, Randy Bouknight began influencing the lives of students as the university's Assistant Dean of Students and Dean of Men. Two years later, the university's new President, Larry Jackson, would promote

After serving Lander University as Vice President for Student Affairs for nearly 40 years, Randy Bouknight begins new role as special ambassador for the university beginning August 1. His new duties will incorporate a blend of community and alumni relations, cultivating new relationships and calling on longstanding friendships to increase support for Lander students.

the promising young man to become Dean of Students.

Bouknight was appointed as Dean of Student Affairs in 1977, and once again promoted to a higher-level leadership position as Vice President for Student Affairs in 1979 - where he has remained for nearly 40 years.

"I first met Randy when I was working in the President's Office as a temporary employee back in 1979," said longtime assistant Pam Bartley. "I had no idea that he would end up being my supervisor for over 38 years."

Over the decades, Bouknight's responsibilities expanded into overseeing a comprehensive division that focuses on all areas that relate to the comfort, health and safety of Lander students. His far-reaching network of departments includes the offices of Housing and Residence Life; Career Services; Student Activities; Campus Recreation and Intramural Sports; Student Health Services; Disabilities and Counseling Services; the Equestrian Center; Food Services; and the University Police.

He also oversees the university's Behavioral Intervention Team, the Office of Student Conduct, the Student Handbook, and is Advisor to the Student Government Association (SGA).

During the Spring 2018 Student Life Awards ceremony, Bouknight was recognized for his years of service and outstanding contribution to the university. Met by a standing ovation, the highly regarded Vice President for Student Affairs was honored by words of appreciation, admiration and respect by his team of professional staff members and President Cosentino.

Cindy Dysart, Director of Housing and Residence Life, spoke to those attending. "Randy has played a significant role in who we are, what we stand for, and what makes us unique - and we are all the better for it," she reflected.

Linda Dolny, chair of Lander's Board of Trustees, first met Bouknight in 1993 and attributes him as being an important part of Lander's success. "I am personally going to miss Randy in the role he has held for so long, but he will be assisting Lander in meeting new challenges" she said. "I am excited to work with him in this new opportunity."

A New Chapter
"I have enjoyed the collegiate environment - and while I have had job offers at larger universities, as well as in the business sector, I always knew that Lander and Greenwood were where I belonged" reflected Bouknight.

A new office awaits Randy Bouknight to enter its doors and step into yet another successful chapter of his life of service to students of Lander University. When he's not traveling across the region to reconnect with alumni in their hometowns, Bouknight will be meeting with community leaders and businesses to ignite a strong foundation of support for Lander students.

Lander just completed a nationwide search for a new Vice President for Student Affairs. Dr. Boyd Yarbrough, who comes to Lander from Cleveland State University, was expected to take the lead on August 1.

Bouknight can be found under the roof of the Lander Foundation and Alumni Center on 302 Hampton Ave, where he will be easily accessible to alumni and the Greenwood community.

How to help prepare young people for the workforce

(StatePoint) Student loan debt is on the rise and, unfortunately, the high cost of tuition doesn't mean that graduates are guaranteed to find high-paying, meaningful work after earning a degree.

"Our education and workforce development systems are broken right now, and as a result, the country is facing a crisis," says Mark C. Perna, workforce development consultant, education strategist and author of the new book, "Answering Why: Unleashing Passion, Purpose, and Performance in Younger Generations."

"Millions of jobs in sectors crucially important to our economy and society are open and we have no one with the right skills -- or even the desire -- to fill them," he says.

In "Answering Why" (markcperna.com/book) Perna lays out a road map for better preparing young people for the opportunities ahead, while also closing the skills gap currently dogging the economy.

Here he offers some of his top insights and recommendations:

- Biases and misconceptions about younger generations continue to persist and there's an intergenerational struggle to connect effectively. Perna refers to Generations Y and Z collectively as the "Why Generation," because its members want to understand the "why" behind everything they are asked to do. We need to get to know and understand their traits and abilities if we expect them to perform beyond expectations.

- Non-college career paths have become stigmatized in this country. Experts like Perna believe that teachers and parents need to move away from the belief that everyone has to go to a four-year university to be a successful and productive citizen. Fulfilling, high-demand, high-wage careers can be attained by postsecondary training pathways beyond the traditional college route.

- We should prioritize career development exploration and education as part of the K-12 system, Perna stresses. Even many teachers, counselors and school administrators are themselves unaware of the robust opportunities available to today's youth and have tended to devalue career exploration for the sake of sending everyone through one pathway -- college.

- The Why Generation needs to better understand the relationship between self-motivation and outside motivation when it comes to achieving goals, and parents and teachers can help. To succeed today, young people must develop the 'want-to' that fosters passion, achievement and positive self-esteem.

"As young people prepare for and enter the world of work, we need to coach them to do three things: focus, plan and take action," says Perna. "This generation is tenacious and talented, but they need to be motivated to reach their peak performance. They can do it, but we have to help."

More Americans protecting their vacation investments with travel insurance

Charlotte, N.C. - As international travel grows in popularity, Americans are choosing to protect their vacation investments by purchasing travel insurance. According to a recent AAA Travel survey, nearly 4 in 10 Americans (38 percent) are likely to purchase travel insurance for future international trips. For those travelers, trip cancellation protection is the most valuable benefit with 9 in 10 (88 percent) of those likely to purchase insurance saying that getting their money back, if they cancel a trip, is their top priority.

Close to home, Carolinians are taking comfort in travel insurance policies as well. To date in 2018, AAA Carolinas Travel department has insured 29,300 members with travel insurance -- compared to last year's 25,800 from the same time period.

"There are just too many unknowns, like family emergencies and natural disasters, which can throw an unexpected wrench into a planned vacation," said Sarah Henshall, president of AAA Carolinas Travel. "Travelers are increasingly not taking chances and they're choosing to invest in the value and peace of mind that travel insurance can provide, for international as well as domestic and cruise vacations."

After trip cost (70 percent), the leading influencers for travelers deciding whether to purchase travel insurance are: personal or family health concerns (69 percent); how far in advance the trip is booked (61 percent); and recommendations to purchase insurance by friends or family (57 percent).

In addition to the information collected in the survey, AAA Travel data reflects an increase in demand for travel insurance and members choosing to protect their more expensive vacations. AAA's domestic and international travel insurance sales have increased more than 20 percent year-to-date, with 13 percent more members overall opting to purchase travel insurance last year compared to 2016. In 2017, AAA members insured trips that were approximately 18 percent more expensive than the previous year, according to AAA's 30-year travel insurance partner Allianz Global Assistance.

"The relatively small upfront cost of travel insurance can pay back dividends in the event of sudden and unforeseen circumstances before or during a vacation. As policies and coverage options vary, travelers should consult a knowledgeable travel agent to explore their travel insurance options," continued Henshall.

AAA encourages travelers to keep in mind these advantages of travel insurance to protect their investment in domestic and international trips, as well as cruise vacations. After all, life is unpredictable and some trips need to be cancelled.

- * You landed, your bags didn't. Airlines mishandled more than 22 million bags in 2017. Travel insurance can provide coverage to replace needed items if luggage is delayed, damaged or stolen.
- * Sick happens. Insurance may help cover medical expenses while traveling, internationally and in the United States. Many hospitals outside of the country require cash payments before providing treatment.

- * Health insurance. Most health insurance policies don't cover international travel. Travel insurance can help cover medical expenses and costly medical evacuation back to the United States in emergencies.
- * Flight delays and cancellations. Airlines may not cover all the costs associated with a delayed or cancelled flight. Travel insurance can help reimburse expenses such as rebooking fees, meals and accommodations.

- * Economic uncertainties. The loss of a job or other income may mean having to postpone a trip planned in advance. Travel insurance can help travelers recoup their costs when funds are tight.

AAA's travel insurance research findings are the result of a telephone survey (landline and cell phone) consisting of 1,003 adults living in the continental United States. Interviewing for this survey was conducted June 21-24, 2018. This study has an average statistical error of ±4 percent at the 95 percent confidence level for all U.S. adults.

USC Upstate earns ITA All-Academic Team honors

The USC Upstate men's and women's tennis programs were honored by the Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) recently as it released the 2018 All-Academic Teams and Scholar-Athletes.

The Spartan men and women were both recognized as ITA All-Academic Teams while a total of 11 student-athletes picked up Scholar-Athlete accolades. The women had six honorees including Gabriela Cevallos, Morgan Dodd, Taylor Dodd, Elin Hellberg, Carol Sigaki and Vale Zarama. For the men, there were five honored in Ankush Arora, Francisco Neto, Luka Eble, Felix Ewers and Samuel Schiano.

In all, 735 teams and 4,328 student-athletes across all five divisions of college tennis were hon-

South Carolina earns high marks for fiscal transparency

By Richard Eckstrom
S.C. Comptroller

My office was pleased to receive national attention recently for our efforts to shed light on how your tax dollars are spent.

The state's fiscal transparency website was ranked among the top 10 in the country by a prominent government watchdog organization, the U.S. Public Interest Research Group. The group, which advocates transparency as a tool to hold government accountable, reviewed the transparency sites of all 50 states and issued grades based on how well states make detailed spending information available to the public.

Our site – an “online check register” showing state agencies' detailed expenditures -- earned a B+ on the group's “Following the Money” report. But more importantly, we were one of just three states to receive the top score in what they call a “Real World” evaluation, which tests the websites' comprehensiveness and usability. That study used focus groups that included professional and amateur researchers who were asked to find six specific spending items; the sites were graded on how easily the information could be found.

Only on South Carolina's, Arkansas' and Kentucky's transparency sites were the focus groups able to easily find all six expenditures.

The term “transparency” is used to refer to a number of issues related to giving citizens access to the inner workings of government — making sure meetings of public bodies are properly advertised to increase citizen-participation; responding to requests from the public for records and documents in a timely manner; publishing as much useful information as possible on the web; and making checkbook-level spending details easily available to the public.

I've focused my own efforts on online fiscal transparency. For one thing, it's the area of finance that falls under my purview as the state's accountant. And as a CPA, I can tell you there's no better remedy to the age-old problem of wasteful spending than publishing itemized spending for all to see. It's perhaps the most stringent form of open government.

When it comes to open government, South Carolina typically stacks up near the middle; we do better than many other states, but there are also many areas controlled by our General Assembly in which we must demand improvement — including the state's limited open-records laws, lobbyist disclosure reporting, and management of the state pension fund. So it's especially gratifying to receive high marks for online fiscal transparency, a cause to which my staff and I have assumed responsibility and devoted countless hours over the past decade.

Still, we're committed to continuously striving to find ways to make public spending details as convenient to access and as easy to understand as possible -- and to provide a positive example for others to follow. And we ask for your help: visit cg.sc.gov, click on the “Fiscal Transparency” button near the top of the page, locate the contact link, and provide your feedback or suggestions to cgoffice@cg.sc.gov.

And as always, I urge those of you who support fiscal transparency to contact your local officials. If they're already on board, give them a pat on the back. If not, hold their feet to the fire.

Our nation's founders viewed citizen-access to government information — including finances -- as vital to preserving freedom and liberty. Consider the words of Thomas Jefferson, who in 1802 wrote, “We might hope to see the finances of the Union as clear and intelligible as a merchant's books, so that every member of Congress and every man of any mind in the Union should be able to comprehend them, to investigate abuses, and consequently to control them.”

That was when ledgers were generated with pens and paper. In an era of digital communication and smart phones, there are fewer and fewer excuses not to give people ready access to details about public spending.

Richard Eckstrom is a CPA and the state's Comptroller.

Five ways to set up the ultimate workstation for kids

(StatePoint) This school year, you can help set up your kids for success. It's all about having the perfect study zone at home. Here are five cool ideas for creating a workspace for kids that will promote great study habits and inspire learning.

1. Find the right real estate. Every child learns differently. So, depending on the person doing the studying, the perfect space could be a quiet, bright corner of the house away from the hustle and bustle, or it could be in the midst of family life and activity. Experiment with each set up, periodically checking in with your child to see what's working and what's not.

2. Upgrade visual learning. Is your child a visual learner? Upgrade study time in any sized space with a short throw projector that automatically adapts the projection brightness to the lighting conditions in the room. One option that allows you to control the projector wirelessly from a smartphone or tablet is the Casio Ultra Short Throw LampFree

Projector XJ-UT351WN which features a mercury-free laser and LED hybrid light source, making it an eco-friendly and safe option for young students.

3. Embrace the principles of natural wellness. It is said that certain essential oils can promote focus and improve concentration. These can be diffused, rolled, or simply inhaled to give students a boost when it comes time to cram for an exam.

4. Make time for music. Studies have found that music can help improve memory. And making music can be an effective stress reliever in the face of school-induced stress. Consider outfitting your child's study area with an affordable, lightweight instrument like a Casio CT-X Keyboard, which features an extensive library of 600 tones and 195 rhythms, supporting diverse musical genres. Whether it's a 20-minute study break, or a jam session once homework is completed, make it possible for musical creativity to come to life.

5. Incorporate educational tech. Education tech tools can help synthesize classroom concepts. Be sure your child's workspace incorporates new tech like ClassPad.net, a web-based mathematics resource for K-12 and beyond, which students can use to draw geometry figures freehand and input calculations as they would on real scratch paper. Great for study buddies, the tool allows for simultaneous work with calculation, graphing, geometry and data analysis/statistics. PHOTO SOURCE: (c) leszekglasner/stock.Adobe.com
