City of Spartanburg welcomes new City Planning Director to spearhead growth and revitalization efforts

Information courtesy of the City of Spartanburg

The City of Spartanburg recently announced the selection of Fredalyn Michelle Frasier as its new City Planning Director. Fredalyn, a distinguished leader in urban planning and design, returns to her South Carolina roots to manage Spartanburg's ambitious growth and development strategies.

Fredalyn's extensive career in urban planning is marked by her leadership of interdisciplinary teams on transformative projects across the Southeast and the Bahamas. From post-Katrina planning efforts in New Orleans, to Tax Allocation District planning for the Atlanta Beltline and regeneration strategies for Nassau, her work is a testament to her expertise and passion for community sustainability. Her experience in South Carolina is particularly notable, where she has significantly contributed to landmark community projects. development Fredalyn spearheaded the Lowcountry Model Communities Revitalization Master Plan in North Charleston and led the Atlanta. multidisciplinary team for 72K acre East Edisto Land Development Strategy for MeadWestvaco in Charleston/Dorchester/Berkely counties and early in her career she led the planning team responsible for the first Comprehensive Plan for the Town of Hilton Head Island.

During her most recent tenure as the Planning & Urban Design Senior Director with the Atlanta Downtown Improvement District and Central Atlanta Progress, Fredalyn was charged with facilitating an efficient downtown development review process and successfully established operational and programming elements for the Downtown Arts and Entertainment District, enhancing public spaces and promoting local art and culture. Through various initiatives, Fredalyn bolstered engagement, creative working collaboratively with stakeholders to establish core program elements while providing significant financial support to the local arts community. These projects promoted unprecedented cultural and public space programming and funding to over 150 local artists and creatives in the past four years and have played a central role in enriching public gathering spaces, and the cultural landscape in Downtown Atlanta.

Fredalyn's journey in urban planning began at EDAW/AECOM Design + Planning and led to prominent roles within the firm, and later with SAFEBuilt Corporation as a Project Director contributing significantly to the building effort for the City of

As Spartanburg's City Planning Director, Fredalyn will lead the city's planning department, with a critical focus on comprehensive development and the update to zoning and land use regulations. A pivotal part of her role includes advancing the city's new and award-winning Comprehensive Plan, a $750 million initiative set to reshape Spartanburg through significant investments by local, regional, and national developers. This includes a landmark $435 million minor league baseball stadium, encircled by extensive mixed-use development. "We are thrilled to welcome Fredalyn back to South Carolina and into our Spartanburg community," said City Manager Chris Story. "Her comprehensive experience, coupled with a deep-rooted commitment to community development, positions her as the ideal team member to direct our city planning initiatives toward continued sustainable growth and prosperity."

"Spartanburg is undergoing one of its most exciting phases ever, and we are excited to welcome Fredalyn to Spartanburg. Given her wealth of experience, Fredalyn will be able to work collaboratively with developers, and manage an efficient development review process. This will further our community's attractiveness for future investment and ecodevelopment prospects," said OneSpartanburg, Inc. Chief Economic Development Officer Katherine O'Neill.

"I was impressed by Ms. permitting optimization Frasier's breadth of experience, and I am excited to see her bring her knowledge and understanding to Spartanburg," offered City Planning Commission Chairperson Dr. Phillip Stone. "I look forward to working with her as all of the boards and commissions help to implement our comprehensive plan over the next few years."

"Taking on this role feels like coming full circle for me, blending my years of professional experience with a personal commitment to making communities better places to live," said Frasier. "Working across different regions and with communities of every demographic blend has taught me a lot about what it takes for a place to flourish in its own unique way. I'm excited to apply these insights in Spartanburg, contributing to the significant work already in progress, and helping to bring impactful ideas to the table. I was drawn to the collaborative spirit that exists in Spartanburg and look forward to working together with the city team and the community in advancing the city's goal to be a thriving, inclusive and sustainable place for everyone."

The Boland Group supported the City of Spartanburg in conducting the Planning Director search, winnowing the field from over 250 prospects and sources from South Carolina, North Carolina, and Georgia to four very competitive finalists in 90 days.

History-making generosity

In a history-making gesture of generosity, Robby Atkins '65 has endowed the director of athletics position at Wofford College.

The $3 million investment creates the first endowed fund to support a coaching or staff position at the college. This places Wofford among the 12% of Division I Football Bowl Subdivision institutions to have an endowed director of athletics position.

Scott Kull, Wofford's new director of athletics, is first to hold the Robert D. Atkins '65 Director of Athletics position.

"What a gift! To step onto campus for my first official day of work as director of athletics and be able to thank Robby Atkins for this remarkable contribution is the stuff of legend," says Kull. "I'll work every day to live up to the honor and responsibility of this new endowed position."

Atkins gives credit to the college — and a scholarship that made his enrollment at Wofford possible — for his successful career in business. He continues to give out of gratitude.

"I'd like to think that any graduate of Wofford would find some way to give something back, regardless of the amount," says Atkins, retired owner and president of Atkins Machinery. "Wofford gives out lots of financial aid, so nearly everyone gets some kind of assistance to attend. I realize that many may not have the funds right out of college, but when their situation changes, I can only hope they will find a way to give back to Wofford."

In 1989, Atkins began annually funding a full tuition, room and board scholarship for a student-athlete on the college's football team. He added another annually funded scholarship for a member of the men's basketball team in 2017 as a gesture of gratitude for the transformational gifts Jerry Richardson '59 made in the Rosalind Sallenger Richardson Center for the Arts and the Jerry Richardson Indoor Stadium. Atkins has planned in his estate to ultimately endow both scholarships. Also in 2017, he and his wife, Susan, an artist, endowed a scholarship for a studentartist. Atkins is a founder of the James-Atkins Student-Managed Investment Fund at Wofford and has served on the President's Advisory Council, the Terrier Club Board of Directors and the college's Investment Advisory Committee.

City of Greenville hires first Economic Development Corporation President/CEO

Information courtesy of the City of Greenville

The City of Greenville has hired Sam Konduros to lead business recruitment, investor relations and work collaboratively with economic development partners for the Greenville City Economic Develop-Corporation ment (GCEDC). Konduros, who describes himself as "mission-driven" and an "entrepreneur at heart," is a licensed attorney, certified economic developer and realtor. He's held multiple business leadership roles regionally and statewide including President/CEO of Upstate SC Alliance and President/CEO of SCBio (South Carolina Biotechnology Industry Organization).

Konduros began his career at the SC Department of Commerce where he helped recruit a wave of international companies into South Carolina. He is a graduate of Clemson University and University of South Carolina School of Law. He was designated as a "Knowledge Economist" South Carolina Research Authority (SCRA) and was awarded the Order of the Palmetto by the Governor in 2018.

"The City of Greenville prides itself in its innovation and 24/7 vibrance.

Sam Konduros

Sam is a dynamic, highenergy leader, with decades of experience and strong relationships. It's a perfect pairing," Mayor Knox

"Through his service on the Board of Directors at the Greenville Chamber and executive roles at partner agencies. Sam has the institutional knowledge of an insider, but will bring fresh perspective to the City of Greenville's economic development efforts."

The GCEDC was established by City Council in June of 2023 to implement the City's Economic Development Strategic Plan with a focus on real estate and property development, small and minority business, retail, marketing, investor relations and business recruitment. The GCEDC is a 501(c)3 with a board of directors and the ability to raise private funds.

"With his track record of successfully setting up economic development organizations in South Carolina, which are still thriving today, we are thrilled to have Sam join the City of Greenville to establish the GCEDC to deliver corporate headquarters, recruit retailers and restaurants, and support our small business owners," said City Councilor John DeWorken.

Konduros, who lives in Greenville County, is expected to begin his new role in April.

Duke Energy appoints Harry Sideris president of the company; additional leadership changes announced

CHARLOTTE, N.C. -Duke Energy recently announced a set of executive leadership appointments, including the promotion of Harry Sideris to president of Duke Energy, effective April 1. Lynn Good remains Duke Energy's chair and CEO, as she continues to lead one of the nation's largest clean energy transitions through a strategy committed to reliability and affordability for its cus-

Separately, the company also announced that Steve Young is retiring from the role of executive vice president and chief commercial officer, effective June 30. He will continue with the company as a senior advisor to Duke Energy until that time.

As president, Sideris, a 28-year company veteran, will have responsibility for Duke Energy's electric and gas utilities, including all aspects of customer service and operations. He will continue to report to Good.

Sideris most recently served as EVP of customer experience, solutions and services. In that role, Sideris led transmission, distribution and customer operations, as well as economic development activities. Sideris has previously served as president of the company's Florida regulated utility, chief distribution officer, and senior vice president of environmental, health and safety.
