USC Upstate's Luka Eble named to Big South All-Academic Team

Charlotte, N.C. – The Big South Conference office announced the members of the Men's Tennis All-Academic team in a press release sent out on Thursday afternoon, USC Upstate junior Luka Eble (Baden-Württemberg, Germany) earned a spot on the 2020 squad.

"We're excited to see Luka garner this type of recognition from the Big South Conference," USC Upstate head tennis coach Tim McLane said. "It says a lot about the type of student-athlete he has been during his time here at Upstate. He's always been one of, if not the, hardest working players I've ever coached, and he always extended that work ethic into the classroom. It's nice to see that kind of work ethic and effort acknowledged."

Eble, a business administration major accumulated a 3.97 overall grade point average and has been named to the Chancellor's List numerous times in her career at USC Upstate. The Spartans No. 3 singles player, Eble amassed 14 career singles victories and 16 career wins on the doubles court.

This is the first Big South All-Academic team accolade for Eble in his collegiate career.

Tindall Corporation expanding operations in Spartanburg County

Columbia - Tindall Corporation, a leading provider of precast, prestressed architectural and structural systems, recently announced plans to expand operations in Spartanburg County. The more than $27.9 million investment will create 20 new jobs.

With roots dating back to 1963, Tindall Corporation's in-house engineering, manufacturing, logistics and on-site resources support both traditional and specialized construction project applications using precast concrete. The company creates custom structures for the construction industry serving end users in a variety of markets, including utility, ed Tindall Corporation Vice President & General Manager Joel Sheets.

South Carolina Governor Henry McMaster added, "Now more than ever we are working hard to take care of the companies that call South Carolina home, and the people they employ. Tindall Corporation is a great South Carolina company that we are proud of, and we congratulate them on their investment that will bring more jobs to the Upstate."

Located at 2877 Fairforest Clevedale Road in Spartanburg, Tindall Corporation will construct its state-of-the-art Utility Division manufacturing facility to increase production capacity and expand product offerings. Precast concrete made at the new facility will be shipped throughout the Southeast and beyond, accommodating a wide range of construction needs. "Tindall Corporation has been a longtime partner in South Carolina's business community, and we are thrilled to see this homegrown company's footprint continue to grow. Congratulations to Tindall Corporation on this latest expansion, and we look forward to their continued success for many years to come," stated Secretary of Commerce Bobby Hitt.

"Expansions of existing industries in Spartanburg County are an indication of healthy economic development conditions. Tindall Corporation has been a solid corporate partner in Spartanburg, providing great jobs and excellent products for over five decades. This expansion will allow for increased production capacity, market diversification and new automation solutions," added Spartanburg County Council Chairman A. Manning Lynch Jr.

Clinical depression is much more than feeling sad

From the American Counseling Association

Spring is often a favorite time of the year. Warmer temperatures, longer days and increased opportunities to get outside and enjoy nature. And yet, for large numbers of people, the changes in weather and long days do little to overcome their serious feelings of sadness.

The reality is that we all experience mild forms of depression at various times. It's a normal human emotion, a common response to a loss, a failure or a disappointment. When things in our lives don't go quite as we planned or desired, it's very natural to feel blue or sad about what has happened.

But this emotion that we know as ordinary depression is not the same as major depression. Clinical depression is a serious emotional and biological disease, a long-lasting condition that has serious negative implications for our lives. It is a medical condition that affects our moods and feelings, as well as our behavior and physical health.

Clinical depression can be treated, but can often be hard to diagnose from the outside. If someone close to you has the flu or a sprained ankle, the problem is obvious. But the symptoms of serious depression can be harder to spot, especially when the person's depression causes them to withdraw from relationships. In addition, the feelings of sadness and low self-worth that major depression can bring on make it difficult to self-diagnosis, admit to and seek treatment for what they're experiencing. Yet there are clear, recognizable symptoms of serious depression. Most common are major changes in sleep habits or appetite patterns. Clinical depression can make concentrating harder, and increase feelings of fatigue and lethargy. A depressed individual will often lose interest in their usual activities, have feelings of hopelessness or guilt, and will suffer from low self-esteem. Clinical depression's most serious effects can be selfdestructive actions. They can range from excessive use of alcohol and drugs to suicide. If you, or someone you know, is displaying any of the symptoms of serious depression for more than a period of two weeks, or if they talk about or display intentions of suicide, seek medical help. A family physician or local mental health clinic can be a good starting point. Treatments ranging from medications to ongoing sessions with a professional counselor can help overcome the problem in many cases. But major depression is a mental health issue that needs to be addressed.

Spartanburg art agency launches website to exhibit and sell art

In reaction to COVID-19 and the demand for online art exhibitions and sales, Artists Collective Spartanburg has launched a new website - Shops.Artists CollectiveSpartanburg.org that features the work of local artists.

"This is something we have wanted to do, and COVID-19 pushed us to quickly develop and bring online a website that showcases the work of our members and gives the public an easy way to make purchases," Collective Chair Beth Regula said. "We have more than 50 members and all of them have been invited to 'set up shop' on this website. It's one of their membership benefits. Plus, it's a great benefit to the patrons of the arts, giving them an online way to see the work and purchase it, avoiding possible coronavirus exposure."

Normally, the art venue is open to the public Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m. - 4 p.m., however, it is now closed to the public because of the coronavirus pandemic.

The new website is set up so that each artist has his or her own "shop." When visiting one of these shops, the patron can see photos of art by the artist. In addition, there is information on pricing, materials, availability, shipping, and the artist. Currently, the website features jewelry, glass fusion, miniatures, mixed media, paintings, and photographs. Payment can be made by credit or debit card.

All members have the option to have a free shop on the website, and so far several have established their presence with more expected to go virtual as the site gains popularity.

"It's a very user friendly website," Regula said. "By word of mouth so far, people are already visiting the site and buying art, which absolutely thrills me. Artists Collective | Spartanburg is focused on the artists of this community. We try very hard to provide private and affordable studio space, public galleries with current exhibitions, the community's most extensive gift shop for locally made art, and now this new website. We are always looking for ways to help artists and to make art more available to the general public."

Artists Collective Spartanburg is one of the leading not-for-profit art agencies in Upstate South Carolina. It is a membership-based agency with more than 50 members, most of whom live and work within driving distance of Spartanburg. The venue is located at 578 West Main St. in a converted three-story Baptist church. Normally, it hosts three public and free art exhibitions each month, but the venue's galleries are now closed to the public because of the pandemic until further notice.

Red Cross receives $100,000 from S.C. Automobile Dealers Association to help keep adequate blood supply and storm relief

Columbia - In order to offset the extraordinary challenges to the American Red Cross of South Carolina's mission of collecting lifesaving blood and responding to disasters due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the South Carolina Automobile Dealers Association is donating $100,000 dollars to the organization.

This donation will help at this uniquely critical moment as we are facing fewer blood donations nationwide even as we face exponential increases in operating costs. In South Carolina, 32 hospitals depend on that lifesaving blood being on the shelves and available to meet the need across our communities.

In April, storms ripped through parts of South Carolina destroying homes and leaving hundreds impacted. The Red Cross was in those communities within hours to help and continue that work today. We have had nearly 2,000 overnight shelter stays and provide nearly 8,000 meals and snacks while continuing damage assessment. In addition, this support allows us to continue our work to respond to disasters, support our military and teach life-saving skills. In the month of March, our teams responded to over 130 home fires across the state.

"This has been a very difficult time for everyone in South Carolina as we adapt to this COVID-19 environment and continue to recover from the April storms" said Louise Welch Williams, the Regional CEO of the Red Cross of South Carolina. "We are so appreciative of the South Carolina Automobile Dealers Association and their generous donation and commitment to host drives that allows us to support communities in this state, every day."

"With this donation, SCADA and our franchised Dealer body of South Carolina, hope to support the Red Cross and our communities as we recover from the devastating virus and storm system that have each impacted many lives in dramatic ways. Our Dealers' existing relationships with the members of our communities go beyond just selling them an automobile, and this is one more way that we are able to give back to all of our friends and family in our communities who make our work possible," says E. Sims Floyd, Jr. of SCADA.

One of the most important things people can do right now during this public health emergency is to give blood. During this uncertain time, we encourage individuals to keep scheduled blood donation appointments and to make new blood donation appointments for the weeks ahead to ensure a stable supply throughout this pandemic. If you are healthy and feeling well, please make an appointment to donate by visiting RedCrossBlood.org.

You can also make a donation, of any size, to help the American Red Cross continue to deliver its lifesaving mission nationwide by visiting redcross.org, calling 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767) or texting the word CORONAVIRUS to 90999. These funds will help us make the urgent investments needed to ensure people can continue to turn to the Red Cross for help and hope-when it's needed most.

Furman named among U.S. Department of Education Green Ribbon Schools

Bv Tina Underwood, Contributor

Furman University has been named a 2020 U.S. Department of Education Green Ribbon Schools Postsecondary Sustainability Awardee. Furman is one of only five higher education institutions in the country and is the only university in South Carolina to receive the award this year. Nominated by the South Carolina Department of Health and Environmental Control (SCDHEC) in partnership with the South Carolina Commission on Higher Education, Furman was recognized by the Department of Education for reducing environmental impact and costs, improving health and wellness and offering effective sustainability education.

Furman representatives will receive a plaque for the award Aug. 4, 2020, during a ceremony in Washington, D.C.

"Furman is truly honored to be named among the 2020 U.S. Department of Education Green Ribbon Schools," said Weston Dripps, executive director of the Shi Institute for Sustainable Communities.

Why playtime matters more than ever right now

(StatePoint) In these unprecedented and uncertain times, play is critical to physical and emotional well-being, helping both kids and adults decompress and stay positive while providing countless learning opportunities.

"With families encouraged to practice social distancing and many schools closed, it's more important than ever to keep playing together as a family," says Anna Yudina, senior director of marketing initiatives, The Toy Association. "Play not only sparks joy, but has numerous benefits for kids and parents alike."

To help families make the most of their time together, The Genius of Play, a national movement to educate parents and caregivers about play's vital role in child development, has launched "Play Today," a new online destination for families to stay well and play on. As part of the initiative, they are sharing play ideas and inspiration to keep kids busy and engaged.

Reasons to Play Today

• Play offers six key developmental benefits, helping kids hone their physical, emotional, cognitive, creative, social and communication skills.

• Research points to a direct correlation between play and stress reduction. In stressful times, play can bring comfort and relieve anxiety for everyone.

• Play stimulates little minds and keeps children engaged and learning even as schools remain closed.

• Play provides an outlet for creativity and imagination, lifting spirits and delivering much-needed positive emotions.

• Play brings families together and is an opportunity to make lasting memories that will live long after the current crisis is over.

How to Play

• Let the kids lead the way! Encourage children to share how they want to play and to use their imaginations, plus things they have around the house, to put their ideas into action.

• Use toys to dial up fun and enhance learning. From stuffed animals, action figures and dolls to construction sets and science kits, there are thousands of toys that can ignite kids' curiosity and spark hours of play and hands-on exploration. The American Academy of Pediatrics has acknowledged the importance of high-quality toys in early childhood to facilitate cognitive development, language interactions, symbolic and pretend play, problem-solving, social interactions and physical activity.

• For the most beneficial play and to create the most fun, it's important for parents to select toys that match their children's interests, abilities and developmental skills. For a research-based toy and play guide, parents and caregivers can visit TheGeniusofPlay.org.

• Use technology to connect with others. Throw a virtual dance party or take the kids on a field trip to their favorite zoo or museum.

• Get active. From "Simon Says" to action hero role play to musical chairs, there are endless ways to be active. Modeling fun physical activities can help instill the importance of movement.

Get Inspired

Free online resources are available to provide families with play inspiration. The Genius of Play's #PlayToday hub offers indoor and virtual play ideas, expert advice, and lots of games for families of all sizes to help them make the most of their time together. To access this information, as well as athome learning resources for social distancing and expert tips from leaders in education and child development, visit TheGeniusofPlay.org.

"With families suddenly spending more time at home, there has never been a better time to play than today," says Yudina.

Clemson board approves tuition freeze for 2020-21 academic year

By Tara Romanella, Clemson University Relations

Clemson University's Board of Trustees approved on Thursday the University's plan for a tuition and mandatory fee freeze for the 2020-21 academic year for all in-state and out-of-state students. Housing and dining fees are not mandatory, and a decision on those will be Clemson Board of Trustees Chairman Smyth McKissick. "The decision to hold the line on tuition is consistent with Clemson's student-centric approach to providing a relevant, highquality educational experience in as efficient a manner as possible." Clemson has been cited tions of higher education nationally, Clemson has been affected financially by the pandemic and we've already taken steps to control our costs," Executive Vice President for Finance and Operations Tony Wagner said. "Our University is in a position to make this commitment to our students because of the ongoing focus on efficiency of each of our colleges and departments."

The University has previously announced an immediate hiring freeze, reduction in travel expenses and other temporary budget cuts.

As a result of the University's commitment to efficient operations and the State's support, 54 percent of Clemson graduates leave with no student debt, compared to 35 percent nationally. Simultaneously, Clemson graduates its students at rates well beyond the national average. More than 83 percent of students graduate within six years, compared to 59 percent nationally.

made in the near future.

"This tuition freeze provides a bit of stability for our families during these uncertain times," President Jim Clements said. "I want to express my thanks to our Board of Trustees for their leadership in taking this timely action as Clemson continues to provide a great value to our students and to the State of South Carolina and its citizens."

The action marks the first time Clemson tuition has remained constant in recent years. The administration attributed its ability to make this decision to the university's focused efforts on cost containment and operational efficiency, as well as the Governor and the South Carolina General Assembly's investment in higher education through tuition mitigation funding.

The actual average outof-pocket cost to in-state freshmen is only 36 percent of the posted tuition rates and is directly attributable to South Carolina's generous scholarship program and Clemson's commitment to providing financial support to its students. More than 99 percent of all incoming freshmen from South Carolina receive scholarship funding.

Earlier this month, Clemson's Board of Trustees authorized the administration to provide more than $17 million in unused housing, dining and parking fees to students for the Spring semester.

"Our Board is keenly aware of the financial impact the coronavirus pandemic is having on many of our students and their families," said

5. That the collision which is the subject of this lawsuit occurred in Spartanburg County, South Carolina.

6. That on or about September 20, 2018, Plaintiff was travelling north on SC-85 in Spartanburg, South Carolina. The Defendant was also traveling north on SC-85 when she rear-ended another vehicle pushing it into another causing a domino effect. Upon impact the Plaintiff was hurled about within the interior of the motor vehicle causing him to suffer serious injuries which will be fully described herein.

7. That the injuries and damages sustained by Plaintiff were due to and caused by and were the direct and proximate result of the negligent and/or reckless, willful, and wanton acts of the Defendant in one or more of the following particulars, to wit:

(a) In failing to keep a proper lookout for traffic in general and in particular, the Plaintiff;

(b) In failing to timely apply brakes so as to avoid crashing with the vehicle being driven by Plaintiff;

(c) In evidencing an utter disregard for the safety of the public in general and in particular, the Plaintiff;

(d) In traveling too fast for conditions;

(e) In failing to use that degree of care that an ordinary and prudent person would have used under the same or similar circumstances.

8. That as a direct and proximate result of the negligent and/or reckless, willful, and wanton acts of the Defendant, Plaintiff has suffered serious painful and personal injuries. That as a result of his injuries, the Plaintiff has been forced to undergo medical treatment and has incurred medical expenses. That as a result of the Plaintiff's injuries, he has been unable to engage in his normal pursuits of happiness, has suffered emotional distress, and mental anguish, all to his great damage.

WHEREFORE, the Plaintiffs pray judgment against the Defendants as follows:

A. For actual damages found to be just and equitable within

Treating foot and ankle conditions during the COVID-19 crisis

(StatePoint) During this unprecedented time, it's still important to take care of your overall wellness, and your feet are no exception. Healthy feet and ankles are crucial for balance, mobility and a healthy body.

However, it's important to identify which issues can be taken care of via telemedicine and which should be done in person. It's also important to take steps on your own to keep feet healthy.

"Foot and ankle surgeons are here to help keep you healthy via telemedicine visits for non-urgent care and in the office for urgent or serious issues," says Dr. Brett Sachs, DPM, FAC-FAS, a foot and ankle surgeon and Fellow Member of the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons.

Not sure whether your condition requires an inperson appointment? According to Dr. Sachs and the experts at the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons, the following conditions can be seen by foot and ankle surgeons via telemedicine:

• Heel and arch pain, generalized foot pain

- Achilles tendinitis
- Metatarsalgia
- Skin rashes and athlete's foot
- Planter warts
- Big toe pain
- Arthritis
- Gout

However, Dr. Sachs notes that you should visit your doctor for the following conditions and situations: • Post-operative care

• Injuries (sprains or trauma, anything that requires an x-ray for suspected bone fractures)

- Infections
- Ingrown toenails
- Wounds
- Foot ulcers

• Calf pain with warmth, redness, or swelling, which could possibly be a blood clot

It's important to know that if you do have to make an in-person appointment, are taking many steps to protect patients. These measures include taking patients temperatures and performing a comprehensive screening process, having patients and staff wear masks or face coverings, limiting patients and family in the waiting room, limiting patient appointments to prevent overlap, practicing social distancing where possible, and performing extensive deep cleaning of all patient rooms and common areas throughout the day.

A bit of preventive care can also support healthy feet. Here are a few tips from the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons you can follow while at home:

• Stay active. Do sit-ups, pushups, planks, squats and leg lifts or check out virtual fitness classes online. You can still get outside for fresh air without putting yourself at risk. Go for a walk, run or hike while practicing social distancing. If you feel better staying inside, take scheduled breaks to get up and walk around your home.

• If you suffer from foot pain, such as a neuroma, avoid wearing narrow shoes and also avoid walking on hard surfaces barefoot, even in the house. • Do eccentric strengthening exercises like calf raises on a step to prevent or treat Achilles tendinitis.

• Examine your feet regularly for bumps, lumps or other changes.

• Wear comfortable, sensible shoes, especially for exercise. Continue using padding, insoles or whatever special footwear you've been prescribed.

To find a foot and ankle surgeon near you or to find more foot and ankle health tips, visit FootHealthFacts. org, the patient education website of the American College of Foot and Ankle Surgeons.

"While the COVID-19 crisis is understandably top-of-mind for many right now, taking steps to protect your overall health is vital," says Dr. Sachs. "Because so many health problems stem from the feet, paying attention to them is essential for your comfort, safety and overall wellness."

USC Upstate 'up and running' with largest summer offerings in school history

The University of South Carolina Upstate recently announced it is offering more than 360 courses online this summer, empowering students to continue their educational pursuits despite the unprecedented circumstances of the COVID-19 pandemic.

USC Upstate's summer course schedule, which is the largest in the university's history, includes more than 50 classes never before offered by the university during the summer term.

"Our successful transition to virtual instruction during these historic times is a testament to the dedication and resilience of our faculty and students," said Derham Cole, interim chancellor at USC Upstate. "We are proud to be 'Up and running' this summer and delighted to offer a record number of classes to meet the needs of students across the state."

Registration is now open for current USC Upstate students and students seeking to earn credits toward a degree at an institution other than USC Upstate. Students may take two courses in each session of

Do's and don'ts of outdoor fuel use; follow these guidelines to use fuel properly & safely (StatePoint) With stay-athome measures in place, you may find yourself with extra time for getting a jumpstart on outdoor seasonal chores.

But first, you'll need to fuel up, as gasoline, kerosene and diesel fuel are all required for outdoor tasks like removing fallen tree limbs and power washing driveways. Follow this advice from the experts at Scepter to use fuel properly and safely.

Dispose of Old Fuel

"Safely dispose of any leftover fuel in containers from winter activities," says Daniel Marshall, vice president of marketing and business development with Scepter. "Winter fuel is heavier, and a unique blend. Fuel available in spring and summer is different and should be used for lawn care and sporting equipment."

You can safely dispose of a winter mix of gasoline, Marshall notes, by carefully funneling it into your car so that a small amount of remaining winter fuel will mix in with the gasoline in your larger tank.

NHE begins leasing on newly completed Linden Square apartments in Gaffney Greenville - Noted South Carolina-based property management firm NHE, Inc. has begun leasing on its latest affordable housing community in South Carolina with the opening of Linden Square, a 24unit apartment home development situated in Gaffney.

Linden Square joins dozens of other NHE affordable housing properties in markets including Spartanburg, Greenville, Rock Hill, Columbia, Charleston and Anderson, among others.

The Linden Square community is a joint effort made possible with funding through the South Carolina Housing Authority and its Small Rental Development Program, with project development undertaken as a joint effort of NHE Development and Creative Builders of Greenville. The purpose of the initiative is to continue to expand availability of high quality, affordable housing in communities across the Palmetto State. Apartment units at Linden Square are available to prospective tenants with household incomes varying from 30% to 80% of area median levels for Cherokee County.

Located at 160 Stuard Street in Gaffney, the 1-, 2and 3-bedroom apartment homes are located with excellent proximity to the community's main commercial corridor and easily accessible to shopping, dining, healthcare and other community amenities. Walmart, Lowe's, Ingle's and other important retail outlets are all within easy walking distance for residents. "NHE is excited to begin handling management and leasing for Linden Square, which we consider to be an excellent addition to Gaffney's affordable housing landscape," said Taylor Davis, CEO of NHE, Inc. "We have sought the right opportunities in the market for several years for a project such as this, and are pleased to work with Creative Builders, the general contractor for the community, in this important initiative."

Linden Square Apartments feature one, two, and three-bedroom units ranging from 752 square feet to 1,187 square feet. Within each unit, residents enjoy 9-foot ceilings, solid wood cabinets, high-quality laminate countertops and luxury vinyl tile flooring, among other features. Apartments are ENERGY STAR certified, meaning they meet strict program requirements for energy efficiency and achieve a 20% improvement on average over non-certified homes.

Creative ways to go beyond the remotely assigned curriculum while home schooling (StatePoint) Today many parents are seeking ways to keep their kids engaged and learning beyond the schoolwork remotely assigned by teachers.

Many of the team members at Pilot Pen are parents, too. Below, they share some fun and creative ways you can use the power of the written word to help create special moments for kids while imparting valuable lessons.

Share Life Skills

Adjusting to this new normal has found parents wearing even more hats than usual. Many are simultaneously tackling work responsibilities, navigating home schooling and taking care of chores. Make the most of this time by showing kids how to be more organized. It's a valuable lesson they can learn by watching you. The Pilot team recommends teaching kids to keep a daily schedule using erasable FriXion ColorSticks, which allow for color coding activities and staying organized with 16 ink shades to choose from. The unique, thermosensitive ink means there's no need to worry about mistakes -- simply erase and revise. Adding a creative twist to daily tasks is also a great way to teach children life skills. Sorting laundry can be a fun color-matching game for toddlers, while older kids can learn valuable kitchen skills with a family recipe challenge.

These practical life skills can help kids develop confidence and independence, while providing quality time together.

Focus on Family

Having children connect with loved ones can have significant benefits. Start a multi-generational gratitude journal together to create a tangible reminder of what's truly important. Add context to your kids' history lessons by sharing and writing down real stories of relatives' lives during key historical periods. This can help children grasp the lasting importance of these events, while enhancing their sense of family pride. The Pilot team recommends G2 gel ink pens, which come in more than 25 smooth-writing shades to bring color to family stories or colorcode the family tree to see one person's impact through the generations. Take the time to video chat with relatives and get them involved in the project. You can make the most of the present while creating a lasting memory of your family's unique legacy.
