Wofford College announces recommendations from justice, equity, diversity and inclusion study

The Wofford College community spent nine months participating in a process that involved reviewing and reflecting on the college's past, present and future. A 16-member task force consisting of students, faculty, staff and trustees led the college's justice, equity, diversity and inclusion process and made 30 recommendations to the board of trustees after the 2020-21 academic year.

The college's administration spent the summer reviewing those recommendations while assessing the institution's status, responses to recommendations and determining Wofford's next steps. Trustees gathered earlier in August to consider and discuss the administration's review and responses to recommendations.

"The Wofford College Board of Trustees extends gratitude to the students, faculty, staff, alumni and trustees serving on the JEDI task force," said Chris Carpenter, chair of the college's board of trustees. "Each generously gave their time to listen. learn and have hard conversations about student experiences at Wofford and in the world."

According to Wofford President Nayef Samhat, "The recommendations from the JEDI task force are about student success. We also extend our appreciation to the student leaders and others who have spoken out to improve the student experience." Regarding the first recommendation to consider a naming policy for residence halls, trustees determined it was necessary to expand the recommendation by combining it with recommendations to establish a history, memory and place committee and the creation of a campus historian position. An ad hoc committee will be formed to examine the college's history and the names of all buildings that are named honorifically. The committee will be charged with proposing a plan to trustees that will illuminate a more accurate and full history of the college as well as recommendations for using the names of buildings in ways that emphasize Wofford's common history and community.

"The board acknowledges the pain and concern caused by the past and by buildings named honorifically for the college's first three presidents, all of whom owned enslaved people," Carpenter said. "Although we are not changing the names of these three residence halls, there is an expectation that the work of this committee will begin this fall and end with the presentation of a plan to better document our complete history and the committee's recommendation of a possible naming policy for review by the conclusion of the 2021-22 academic year." The college's JEDI task force offered compelling options for naming buildings in ways to emphasize the college's common history while building community. Trustees, however, held concerns about changing the names of buildings honoring past presidents who owned enslaved people while retaining the college's The college's name. founder, the Rev. Benjamin Wofford, was a United Methodist minister who also owned enslaved people.

"An authentic history will define both their positive impact on the college and their participation in the institution of slavery," Carpenter said. "We recognize that this is not just important for current students, but also so prospective students understand that Wofford College is wrestling with its past and is committed to ensuring that their experience on campus will be one of honesty."

The board of trustees concluded with a statement that also affirms its support of the college's administration and endorses the efforts of Wofford's

Mystery clock

You probably have seen a "swinger" clock, but never guessed how it worked. Most are small metal statues standing on a base while holding a long baseball bat, pendulum or other long, thin rod that is topped by a clock or a globe. It keeps time and the pendulum keeps swinging, but there is no sign of an electric plug or other power source.

The first "mystery clock" was made by a French magician, Jean Robert-Houdin, in 1845. Many other versions followed. Junghans, a German clock factory, made most of those seen today. Ansonia, an American clock company, also made these unusual clocks. The secret clock parts that kept the hands moving were even patented.

The trick is that part of the base moves around slightly, keeping the pendulum swinging and moving the clock's hands. Another type of mystery clock was made with two clear crystal disks with a clock hand painted on each. The disks turned with power from the base. Many copies of antique mystery clocks have been made.

The model with an elephant swinging the clock is a favorite that was originally made by Junghans, but has been copied in China. Surprisingly, the original had an elephant made of white metal, while the copies made before 1930 were bronze. Watch out. There are many copies sold today, and it is very difficult to tell old from new. There are swinger clocks with figures such as a boy with a bat, the Statue of Liberty, Diana, a cherub and even a kangaroo. Neal Auction Company recently sold a metal swinging elephant clock made about 1900, probably by Junghans, for $576. It had a bronze patina.

Q: Back in the late 1970s and early '80s, I sold Avon products. When the second anniversary of my being a salesperson rolled around, I received a plate called "The Avon Doorknocker." I still have the original box and it's in good condition. I'm trying to determine the value. Where should I to go to sell it?

A: Avon started the California Perfume Company in 1886. The name of the company was changed to Avon in 1939. It might sell at a garage sale, but it's easier just to donate it to a charity. Most Avon Doorknocker plates sell online for as little as $3. ***

As a new academic year kicks into gear, health coverage helps students safely return to school (StatePoint) As a new school year kicks into gear, make sure your child is ready to safely return to inlearning person and extracurricular activities. This means being on top of routine medical visits and ensuring they are protected against vaccine-preventable diseases (like measles and mumps). While parents may have delayed their children's vaccinations and preventive care due to the COVID-19 outbreak, medical offices and clinics are taking extra steps to see children safely during this time. Call to schedule an appointment today. And if your child is 12 years or older and hasn't received their COVID-19 vaccine yet, talk to their doctor about getting it as soon as possible. If your children don't currently have health insurance, it is not too late to get them covered!

school-aged children and teens qualify — and are enrolled — in free or lowcost health coverage through Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP). These health programs can provide vital access to care, including well-child visits and vaccinations, to keep students focused on learning and give parents the peace of mind that comes with knowing their children are covered inside and outside the classroom. The start of the school year is a good opportunity to catch up on important well-child visits and ensure children are up-to-date on their immunizations. Vaccinations, such as those for seasonal influenza, measles and mumps, are particularly important this year, and are covered for children by Medicaid and CHIP. Not only can routine vaccinations, as well as the COVID-19 vaccination, protect children from getting sick and developing serious complications, they can also protect others who may be vulnerable to serious illness, such as babies and other young children, older people, and people classes and perform better in school than those who are uninsured. But health coverage doesn't just benefit students. Fewer missed days of school also mean fewer missed days of work for parents. With health coverage, children can get the routine and emergency care, immunizations, checkapplying for or receiving Medicaid or CHIP when making a "public charge" determination (with one exception for individuals who are institutionalized for long-term care (such as nursing facility residents or residents of mental health institutions) and are receiving Medicaid coverage for This means that having Medicaid or CHIP will not affect someone's chances of becoming a Lawful Permanent Resident or U.S. citizen. Enrollment in Medicaid and CHIP is open all year, and, once your child is enrolled, health coverage must be renewed annually.

Medicaid and CHIP provide free or low-cost coverage for eligible children and teens up to age 19. Eligibility is dependent on household size and income and varies by state. States have different income eligibility rules, but in most states, children with family income up to $50,000 per year (for a family of four) may qualify for Medicaid or CHIP. In many states, family income can be even higher and children can still qualify. Young people up to 21 may be eligible for Medicaid.
