Secretary of State offers free notary public seminar in Spartanburg

Columbia - Secretary of State Mark Hammond is offering eight free regional notary public seminars this summer and fall for all South Carolina notaries and those interested in becoming a notary, including one in Spartanburg.

Notaries public hold an important position of responsibility. Once commissioned as a notary public, it is the responsibility of the notary to maintain a level of training necessary to perform the duties of the position as required by law. These seminars will address state laws governing the duties and responsibilities of notaries. In addition, the seminars will provide information how notaries can avoid pitfalls related to the unauthorized practice of law.

Doors will open one hour prior to start time; seminars will conclude by 7:30 p.m. The Spartanburg County seminar will be held on Tuesday, September 10, 6 p.m. at Spartanburg Community College, Tracy J. Gaines Building, G01, 107 Community College Drive, Spartanburg.

Inman awarded grant from S.C. Department of Commerce

Columbia - Sixteen communities across South Carolina are slated to benefit from public improvement projects supported by more than $9.6 million in funds from the latest round of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding. The S.C. Department of Commerce is awarding CDBG funds to these communities, representing more than 20,660 residents.

The City of Inman received a $750,000 grant to upgrade the East Side Sewer.

Wofford elects new board members

The new trustees were elected June 6 at the South Carolina Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church held in Greenville.

The new trustees, elected June 6 at the South Carolina Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church held in Greenville, are Dr. Blanding Jones, cardiothoracic surgeon in California's Kaiser Permanente system; Wade Keisler, real estate developer and philanthropic leader in the Midlands of South Carolina; Greg O'Dell, chief executive officer of Events DC, the official convention and sports authority for the District of Columbia; and Margaret Young, partner with international accounting and consulting firm PriceWaterhouse Coopers. Re-elected to new fouryear terms on the board were John Hipp, class of 1975; Stewart Johnson, class of 1967; Craig Melvin, class of 2001; and Dr. Danny Morrison, class serving on the President's Advisory Council as well as serving on various committees as a member of Wofford's Alumni Advisory Council.

Keisler is a respected business and philanthropic leader in the Midlands area of South Carolina and has served as a licensed real estate broker for the past 25 years. A longtime supporter of Heathwood Hall Episcopal School in Columbia and a member of Saint Stephens Lutheran Church in Lexington, Keisler is a member of the Greater Columbia Association of Homebuilders and the National Association of Homebuilders. Keisler serves on the FOR WOFFORD Campaign Steering Committee and is a former member of the college's Investment Advisory Committee. As chief executive officer of Events DC, O'Dell heads the official convention and sports authority for the District of Columbia. Hailing from Stone Mountain, Ga., he was a member of the Wofford men's basketball team from 1988 through 1992. In his role at Events DC, O'Dell oversees the operations of a $2 billion portfolio of sports and hospitality-related venues inclusive

You do deserve the success you've earned the American From Counseling Association

It's a feeling that affects both men and women. You've achieved success at work, with a community organization, or just within your family, and yet you don't feel you've really earned that achievement.

You may think that your accomplishments come from luck or good timing rather than any real talent and hard work on your part. You may feel like a fraud, not really capable of the tasks facing you.

Having these thoughts is fairly common. They're manifestations of self-doubt and a lack of self-confidence, and there's even a psychological term to describe them --"imposter syndrome."

It's not a psychological disorder but rather a descriptive name developed in the late 1970s. Researchers and clinicians found that they were seeing people who had strong accomplishments yet were often convinced they didn't deserve the success they had won.

It happens to many of us. We may have trouble believing we are as intelligent and talented as we really are. The result can be our crediting outside reasons or forces as to why a good thing is occurring, rather than accepting that we actually made it happen ourselves. Such feelings can become a problem when feeling like an impostor gets in the way of our daily lives. We might be afraid or even frozen when facing a work presentation or speech at a big meeting. We may question or avoid the decisions we need to make regarding our children and family. Professional counselors report that they have seen this self-questioning and lack of confidence in everyone from managers of large businesses to stay-at-home moms. However, there are ways to overcome impostor syndrome. A starting point is to step back and look objectively at your accomplishments. Make a list of positive things, big and small, you've accomplished in the past year. Then own those accomplishments. Give yourself credit for the work and talent that achieved those successes. Research has shown that simply talking to yourself can change how you see yourself. Tell yourself that you are worthy in all aspects of your life. Tell yourself that you are better and smarter than you think you are, and that you know more than you usually give yourself credit for. And be sure to remind yourself of these positive thoughts as often as possible. If a form of impostor syndrome is negatively affecting your life, a professional counselor can offer assistance in overcoming the problem.

Hub City Empty Bowls event

Hub City Empty Bowls will sponsor two free and public pottery bowl-making sessions at Converse College on Saturday, July 13, at 10 a.m.-noon and 1-3 p.m. The bowls made during these creative and grassroots events will be used later to raise money to feed needy Spartanburg citizens through TOTAL Ministries, a faithbased agency that aids people in financial straits.

No talent or skill is needed to participate, only a creative community spirit and the desire to help those in need. All materials -- clay, instruction, space -- are provided at no cost. Participants will hand-shape clay bowls that will be left at Converse College to be finished by experienced potters through the lead sponsoring agency Carolina Clay Artists. In the fall, the finished bowls will be used at the much-anticipated Soup Day, a community event that lets people select the bowls of their choice for $20 donations and then eat soup provided by local restaurants, hear live music, and enjoy the fellowship.

Several hundreds of colorful bowls of various styles and shapes are available on Soup Day. About two dozen restaurants provide the soup. And for the past few years, more than $30,000 has been raised each year.

West Main Artists Co-op to host S.C. Watermedia for second time

For the second year in a row, West Main Artists Co-op (WMAC) will host on behalf of Spartanburg and the entire Upstate the S.C. Watermedia Annual Exhibition that travels throughout the state each year, showcasing the wealth of talent that uses water-based media to create works of art. The exhibit of 30 pieces opened at WMAC on Tuesday, July 2, and will close Saturday, Aug. 3.

The public can see this exhibit for free Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. A public reception for the exhibit will be held on Thursday, July 18, 5 to 9 p.m., during the city's monthly ArtWalk.

Among the 30 pieces that are in the 2018 collection is Tree Tops by former Spartanburg resident Dwight Rose, who is one of the only three artists from Upstate South Carolina chosen for the exhibit.

WMAC is one of the leading arts agencies in Spartanburg. It is a membership-based nonprofit agency that has more than 50 members, most of whom are visual artists. Some are performing artists. Each month, it sponsors three new monthlong exhibit by its members and by guest artists. In addition to its public galleries, it also has about 30 working studios for its members, two stages, a printery, and Spartanburg's most extensive collection of locally made artwork for sale on an ongoing basis. For more information about WMAC, please visit online: WestMainArtists.org

At its May meeting on campus, the board elected these officers for the 2019-20 year: Corry Oakes, class of 1989, chair; Chris Carpenter, class of 1990, vice chair; and Costa Pleicones, class of 1965, secretary.

WLI provides an engaging educational forum for executives and senior managers from diverse backgrounds and disciplines in corporations, law, governmental agencies, educational institutions and nonprofit organizations. By working with one another, the goal of WLI is to enhance vital leadership skills and form a collaborative, lasting network of relationships.

"An understanding of the complex dynamics involved in achieving true success as a leader requires insight into one's personal leadership style and keen business acumen. The seminars offered during each session include a comprehensive view of concepts and strategies that have immediate and practical application in real-world work environments," said Sam Tisdale, director of Furman's Center for Corporate and Professional Development.

WLI explores topics such as negotiation and conflict resolution, communication skills, the psychology behind success, network diversity, leadership styles, best practices for shared success, public speaking, life balance and time management.

WLI extends the invitation to participate in an immersive experience with a nationally recognized liberal arts university, esteemed faculty and accomplished business leaders. The 2020 Institute will be held January through May on the Furman University campus. Applications will be accepted online beginning Aug. 1st.

GADC Existing Industry Manager Kim Williams graduates from Leadership Greenville

Greenville - The Greenville Area Development Corporation has announced that Existing Industry Manager Kim Williams has graduated from Class 45 of Leadership Greenville.

Founded by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce in 1973, Leadership Greenville is designed to identify and inform committed and qualified leaders for an intensive look into issues impacting Greenville, and prepares and motivates participants to provide quality, dynamic leadership within the community. As a graduate, Ms. Williams joins over 2,000 program alumni who are making a difference in their communities.

As Existing Industry Manager at GADC, Ms. Williams serves as a liaison to existing companies expansion projects. To facilitate capital investment and job creation, she assists with locating buildings and sites, develops customized financial packages, and provides statistical analyses.

She joined GADC after 13 years with site selection firm McCallum Sweeney Consulting (MSC), where she held the role of Principal. While at MSC, Ms. Williams led site selection and incentive negotiations for both domestic and international companies that included manufacturing, headquarters, and distribution facilities. She also worked as a project manager in MSC's economic development practice, leading site readiness and certification programs for states and regions throughout the United States.

Ms. Williams holds a master's degree in City and Regional Planning from Clemson University and a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics from Centre College in Danville, Kentucky. She is an active member of the South Carolina Economic Developers' Association, the Greenville Splash, and the Greenville Track Club.

Are you doing enough to protect your skin from the sun?

(StatePoint) Think you're doing enough to protect your skin from the sun? Don't be so sure. Experts say that many people assume their sun protection routine is sufficient when it's not.

"While summer is an excellent reminder that sun protection is a vital component of health and wellness, it's actually necessary all year round and under circumstances you may not realize," says Floridabased dermatologist, Dr. Richard C. Kirkpatrick.

Here are a few things to keep in mind:

• Make-up may not be enough: If your makeup contains SPF 15, don't assume you're covered. Luckily, there are sun protection options today that leave a matte finish and won't mess with your cosmetics routine. For example, an easy-to-apply, clear matte finish layer of broadspectrum protection under your makeup, such as Ocean Potion Face Zinc SPF 50, will add needed protection while nourishing skin.

• Think in all-day terms: Many people mistakenly believe they receive most of their sun exposure from going to the beach. It's all too easy to underestimate the damage to skin from daily incidental sun exposure, which accumulates and prematurely ages skin. Whether you're driving and catching rays through the window, or walking the dog in the morning, be mindful that you're getting sun exposure and take necessary precautions.

• Think in all-year terms: Again, summertime does provide a visceral reminder of the importance of sun protection and is an excellent time of year to develop a sun protection habit, but don't let this be the only time of year you think about protecting skin. Take a cue from the summer you, and apply sun protection all year.

• Make it easy: One of the toughest aspects of applying sun protection is remembering to do it. But if it's with you, you'll use it. Toss some in your purse or bag. A good portable option is Ocean Potion Dab-On Spot Stick SPF 50, which provides on-the-spot broad-spectrum protection in an oil-free formula, and like all Ocean Potion products it is enriched with deep-sea minerals, seaweed, algae extracts, aloe vera, and antioxidant vitamins B, C and E to replenish and nourish your skin.
Like your choice: Doing the right thing for your skin shouldn't be a chore or create different skin care issues. So be sure you like your choice of sun protection. Look for options that won't clog pores, are lightweight and offer easy application.

Take care of yourself and the planet: Oxybenzone and Octinoxate are chemical ingredients used in certain sun protection that are considered to be harmful to coral reefs. But you can select a sunscreen like Ocean Potion Sport SPF 50 that's Oxybenzone- and Octinoxate-free and not tested on animals, a winwin for you and the planet. With no parabens, PABA, or retinyl palmitate, it offers a lightweight, nongreasy menthol formula with a cooling sensation.

From poolside and beachside bathing to a walk around the block, this summer, create a daily sun protection routine that you take with you everywhere you go.

Greater focus on financial literacy will help young people get ahead

By Richard Eckstrom – S.C. Comptroller

Most of us probably remember learning things in high school that we rarely if ever use as adults – like how to calculate the area of a trapezoid or how to solve a quadratic equation.

Yet nearly all of us do, at some point, need to take out a loan, carefully manage our finances to survive lean times, or save for retirement. Unfortunately, the basic financial literacy needed to master these challenges isn't recent international study by financial analysts at Standard & Poor's: The United States, the world's largest economy, ranks at the unimpressive 14th place globally with only 57 percent of U.S. adults considered financially literate. That places us behind most European countries and only slightly ahead of Bhutan, a slightly-developed country in the mountains of South Asia.

A study conducted by the National Financial Educators Council shows South Carolina's young people running about the national average when it comes to financial literacy. But our goal should be to be better than average.

There's a nationwide movement to make passing a standalone financial literacy course mandatory for a high school diploma, though it appears slow to catch on: Only five states have the kind of requirement now under consideration in South Carolina. That's a shame.

We should do what it takes to ensure that South Carolina students are solidly grounded in financial basics like budgeting, maintaining good credit scores, calculating interest rates, differentiating good debt from bad debt, saving for retirement, and detecting financial scams. That's the stuff they need to know to keep from getting in debt over their heads. And it's more important than ever in a time when cash transactions are increasingly replaced by waving a smart phone -- making it easier to rack up debt without fully realizing it.

To overlook the importance of sound financial literacy is to release into the real world too many adults who are unable to manage money wisely – and even worse, too many members of Congress who are unable to do so.

required learning in South Carolina. The result? We allow financial illiteracy to thrive.

That would change under a bill proposed in the S.C. Legislature earlier this year. The measure would create a standalone, half-semester financial literacy course for South Carolina high schools. Passing it would be required to graduate.

The lessons in finance currently offered in S.C. schools are sandwiched into other courses and aren't required to graduate. That's not good enough.

State lawmakers – who adjourned without taking up the bill during the 2019 session -- should make it a priority next year.

I couldn't help but think about the importance of financial literacy recently while following a particular discussion in Congress. The topic being discussed was student loan debt, and some were arguing for taxpayers to pick up the tab.

It's become extremely common for college students to accumulate very high levels of student loan debt – in the hope that, through hard work, their debt will one day get paid off. But it's apparent that because they don't fully grasp financial basics, too many students have taken on greater debt burdens than they can sensibly bear.

What's the solution? Arguments for having taxpayers wipe out student debt are misguided at best, but what has emerged from the student debt debate is a strong case for requiring better money-management education in our high schools.
