Greenville City Council names Shannon Lavrin new City Manager

Information courtesy of the City of Greenville, SC

Former Assistant City Manager and Planning Director, Shannon Lavrin is Greenville's new City Manager. Lavrin was sworn in during the Formal Meeting of City Council Monday evening and assumes the role immediately.

"We are proud to have a seamless transition in the City Manager position," said Mayor Knox White. "Shannon Lavrin becomes the first urban planner to become city manager and the first woman named to the position permanently. With Shannon, the Council has a true partner in protecting neighborhoods and preserving our quality of life."

The change in leadership comes after the resignation of John McDonough on June 7 to pursue employment with a Greenville development corporation. Council chose not to conduct a formal search, but instead appoint Lavrin, based on her experience, character and strong reputation in the community.

"Hundreds of city residents have worked with Shannon during the long process of crafting and adopting our new land use code. They know first-hand her willingness to listen and to act fairly. The skills we saw her display make her a superb choice for the city's top administrative position," Mayor White said.

Lavrin was hired by the City in January of 2018 as a Development Planner. She was promoted to Assistant Planning and Development Manager and most recently Assistant City Manager. In a previous municipal government role she served as Assistant to the City Manager in Murfreesboro, Tennessee. "This is what I have worked for," Lavrin said.

"I began my career as a Planning Assistant and was told if I wanted to advance, I needed to go back to school. I went to night school for four years to earn a post-graduate degree in Public Administration.

It's been a long climb from the first rung of the ladder, but now, to achieve a professional goal in a city I love, is so deeply rewarding," she said.

As one of her first major assignments, Lavrin worked with community stakeholders to develop the GVL2040 Comprehensive Plan. The plan is the vision document that laid the groundwork for the City's Zoning Code overhaul. The code, passed earlier this month, protects neighborhoods and green space, and directs growth to nodes and corridors. Lavrin says she's equally appreciative of her work on the City's Tree Protection Ordinance and neighborhood small area plans.

"I am proud of the relationships I have built during my five years in Greenville. I have invested as much time as I can in neighborhoods, meeting residents and listening to the desires of the community. I've also been fortunate to build a world-class Planning and Development Department with planners who want Greenville to grow in a balanced, responsible way," Lavrin said.

Lavrin inherits several large projects including the redevelopment of the current City Hall at 206 S. Main, the implementation of the new zoning code, construction of a new police headquarters, fire administration and Municipal Court on Halton Road and capital improvement projects to promote road and bridge safety.

"We will continue to be bold," she said. "Even though Greenville is small, we think big."

Greenville Area Development Corporation names new leader for existing industry initiatives

Greenville – The Greenville Area Development Corporation (GADC) has launched an expanded initiative to support existing companies in Greenville County to grow and thrive, and named veteran management, maintenance and operations executive Matt Duncan as the organization's Existing Industry Manager to lead the effort. In his new role, Mr. Duncan will serve as key liaison to existing companies across Greenville County, focused on ensuring that the community is responsive to their needs and encouraging their growth. He will seek to marshal state and local resources to help facilitate continued capital investment and job creation by existing local companies and will serve as an ombudsman to help with any challenges they are facing. Mr. Duncan served with distinction in the United States Army from 1997-2017 in a range of management, maintenance, and operational support capacities worldwide. Following his retirement from active duty, he worked in the Carolinas for several years adding experience in the life sciences industry, with roles in FDA/DEA monitored environments, process improvement and coordination, quality control and safety management, training and maintenance and facility operations for such global brands as Thermo Fisher Scientific and Nutra Manufacturing (GNC). His career then led him to Colorado Springs to lead maintenance and facility operations for Entegris, a world-class injection molding environment, before returning to Greenville to join the GADC team.

A native of Huntington Beach, California, Mr. Duncan earned his B.A. in of Master Business Administration from the Godbold School of Business at Gardner Webb University. He is certified as a corporate Practical Process Improvement Trainer (LEAN, Six Sigma, and TQM), and has served as Lead Process Improvement Trainer for teams exceeding 100 associates.

"Matt's experience in numerous segments of industry, his track record of leadership and performance during his armed forces career, and his strong business acumen helped him distinguish Matt from an impressive array of candidates we considered for this position," said Mark Farris,

"Greenville County's existing industries account for the highest level of both capital investment and job creation almost every year. The Existing Industry position is critical for our community's economic development success as we seek to encourage sustainable business growth. We are confident that Matt will bring an added dimension in helping existing organizations to grow and thrive here." Joining Mr. Duncan in his return to the Carolinas with GADC is his wife Allison, a South Carolina native from Easley, and their four children.

The GADC's recently unveiled Economic Development Strategic Plan for Greenville County emphasized as one of its foundational principles working even more deeply with existing industry to assist it in growing capital investment, creating business growth and generating high-wage employment. Branded as GADC's Industry Engage initiative, Mr. Duncan will shape the strategies, activities, and initiatives to help Greenville County's existing business community to grow and thrive.

Since its founding in mid-2001, the GADC team's efforts have resulted in the announcement of more than 34,600 new jobs and more than $6.6 billion in capital investment in Greenville County.
