SMC holds historic graduation ceremony

After a year of uncertainty, change, and anxiety, 238 Spartanburg Methodist College students celebrated their perseverance and success at the school's 2021 commencement ceremony at the Spartanburg High School football

The commencement was particularly special to SMC as it marked the first time in its history that four-year bachelor's degree students receive their diplomas from the school. The new Bachelor of Arts program was launched in 2019 and graduated 22 students this year. The college will be launching a new Bachelor of Arts in Business Administration in the fall of 2021.

In addition to the inaugural senior class, the 2020 associate degree graduates walked in the ceremony. Last year's commencement was canceled due to the pandemic, so the college was eager to provide those students with the experience they missed. Approximately 50 students returned to participate in the ceremony.

Immediate Past Chairman of the SMC Board of Trustees, James Fletcher Thompson, delivered the keynote address, encouraging the students to accept and adapt to change and praising their perseverance through a challenging year.

Blue Duck Scooters officially launch in downtown Spartanburg

From the City of Spartanburg and OneSpartanburg

Blue Duck, an e-scooter company based out of San Antonio, TX., launched its first fleet of scooters in South Carolina, kicking off a six-month pilot program in Downtown Spartanburg on Thursday, May 27.

Blue Duck's fleet of 100 scooters are available for rent, seven days a week from 7 a.m. - 10 p.m. To rent a scooter, riders need to download the Blue Duck app to find and unlock scooters near them. An online safety tutorial must also be completed before riding.

The Blue Duck app download, complete with map of eligible ride locations in Spartanburg, can be found online.

"We've worked closely with Blue Duck, and we're excited launch day is finally here. This is a valuable opportunity for Spartanburg that will directly benefit the businesses and thriving cultural district at the heart of Downtown Spartanburg," stated One-Spartanburg, Inc. Chief Economic Development Officer Katherine O'Neill. "It's more important than ver to think creatively about how folks get around within our city's urban core. We're excited at the prospect of building on the successes we've seen over the last decade with Spartanburg's BCycle program on that front and we can't wait to see our residents and visitors taking advantage of the new way to experience Downtown Spartanburg that Blue Duck will provide," stated City of Spartanburg City Manager Chris Story.

Blue Duck Senior Director of Partnerships Megan McNamara added, "The Blue Duck team has been long engaged with key stakeholders from Spartanburg to collaboratively design a thoughtful approach for the community's shared micromobility program and future. We are very excited to officially launch the first e-scooter program in the state of South Carolina and to provide a last-mile solution to residents, students and visitors. This will be a great addition and amenity for all those who live, work and play in Spartanburg."

The scooters can only be ridden in bike lanes or streets where the speed limit is 25 mph or lower. Users must be 18 or older with a valid driver's license.

Spartanburg is the 11th location nationwide with a fleet of Blue Duck scooters, and the first in South Carolina.

Patriotic potatoes

Do you love potatoes but think they're fattening? Potatoes are good for you and have one of the highest nutritional values in the produce department. At just 25 cents per serving, a medium potato (5.3 ounces), eaten with its skin on, has just 110 calories. Potatoes provide nearly half your daily value of vitamin C and are one of the best sources of potassium, which helps to maintain normal blood pressure. Potatoes also are naturally fat- and sodium-free and contain many of the nutrients that are recommended as part of a healthy diet.

To create a festive dish in honor of Flag Day, try using red, white and blue potatoes! Here's some more information about these colorful tubers.

Red potatoes

Rosy-red skin and white flesh. Firm, smooth, moist texture; well-suited for salads, roasting, boiling and steaming. Round reds are often referred to as "new potatoes," but the term "new" technically refers to any variety of potato that is harvested before reaching maturity.

Tip: Roast Reds for Salads -- Instead of boiling red potatoes for salads, try roasting them, whole or cut up, to intensify their flavor and bring out their sweetness. Then add vinaigrette or a mayo-based dressing.

Sweet research: Pittman receives $400,000 NIH grant

Dr. David Pittman, a professor of psychology and coordinator of the program in neuroscience, has been awarded a five-year, $400,755 grant from the National Institutes Health to conduct taste research in collaboration with the University of Southern California. Dr. Lindsey Schier and her team at USC discovered a new, second mechanism that can detect glucose in the mouth.

Schier's team will conduct behavioral tests in genetically altered mice to establish the functionality of the glucosensor, while Pittman's group will record from taste neurons in the brains of those mice. The grant Pittman received will allow his team to do the groundwork that characterizes the neurophysiology of the glucosensor.

"One of the things I find fascinating is that we don't know a lot about taste," Pittman says. "We know a great deal about vision and hearing, but we don't know all the ways our mouths can taste things. There are a lot of really big questions that can be answered."

The study involves performing a delicate surgery on the brains of lab mice. Pittman and his research assistant, Lina Settelmayer '21, have spent countless hours trying to perfect the procedure.

"It's a pretty technical neurosurgery on part of the brain," Pittman says. "The surgery takes an hour or two, and then you can spend another two to four hours searching for the taste neurons. Once you find them you can run the test protocols and record the data."

The study could, eventually, lead to practical strategies for containing sugar consumption in humans.

Settelmayer, a psychology major from Germany, plans to go to medical school after graduation. She says participating in this project has her considering becoming a surgeon.

"The first time I did the whole procedure by myself, I felt the adrenaline as soon as I made the first cut," Settelmayer says. "My hands were steady, my mind was focused and the mouse survived, and I was so proud."

Whatever she ultimately decides, she says she's grateful for the opportunity and experience

Wofford has provided.

"In my home country I would probably not have the chance to participate in this kind of research because universities are so much bigger and only a few students get the chance to be a research assistant," Settelmayer says.

Alex Schrader '24, a Richardson Scholar from Fredonia, N.Y., also is part of the team. He came aboard this spring.

Pittman has been involved with two previous taste research projects while at Wofford. The first sought to determine whether rats can detect dietary fats, how they detect them and how they respond. The second sought to determine how anti-anxiety drugs can act on the taste system and cause people to overeat.

"Wofford is very supportive of research because of the value it gives to students," Pittman says. "The grant allows students to get paid like a job to learn research skills that will be so valuable after gradua-

White potatoes

Round and long, whites are medium in starch level with a creamy texture. They hold their shape well after cooking. The ultra-versatile round white can be used in most potato preparations.

Tip: Potato Salads -- To create signature potato salads, just toss cooked white potatoes with dressings and ingredients "borrowed" from other salads, e.g., Caesar dressing and grated Parmesan, or Ranch dressing, chopped egg and bacon crumbles.

Blue/Purple potatoes

Blue/purple potatoes originated in South America and have now become popular in the U.S. They have a subtle, nutty flavor and flesh ranging from dark blue or lavender to white. Microwaving best preserves color, but steaming and baking also are recommended.

Tip: Red, White and Blues -- Combine blue potatoes with whites and reds in salads or roasted medleys to make all three colors "pop."

Converse College celebrates the life and contributions of Life Trustee Kurt Zimmerli

The Converse community celebrates the life and legacy of longtime supporter, philanthropist, and Converse Life Trustee Kurt Zimmerli, passed on May 30th. Mr. Zimmerli is survived by his wife, Nelly, daughter Kathy Zimmerli Wofford '09, and son Mark (Lea Anne).

Mr. Zimmerli's special understanding and appreciation for the arts and culture at Converse created an enormous impact on Converse and the Spartanburg community. His commitment to Converse began with his love of music, and Mr. Zimmerli was a faithful attendee of Carlos Moseley Chamber Music Series. His presence at Converse became an interest in serving on Converse's Board of Trustees, with his first term beginning in 1983. In 2004, he was designated as a Life Trustee. In 2002, Mr. Zimmerli was presented with Converse's highest honor, the Dexter Edgar Converse Award. He served for several years as chair of the Finance Committee and of the Buildings and Grounds Committee at Converse, enthusiastically providing dedicated service to the fulfillment of the College's mission, to its financial health, and to its physical plant and appearance.

"Kurt was an extraordinary man. He was a gifted problem solver together with his wife Nelly and through their philanthropy, the Zimmerlis generously provided leadership and financial support for the arts at Converse and in the Spartanburg community, with their numerous gifts supporting facility improvements, performances, and events," said Krista Newkirk, Converse president. "Kurt led the first renovation Twichell auditorium in 1989 and, when he noted the need for accessibility, the Zimmerlis made a generous lead donation to renovate the building again. The Zimmerlis understood that many others in the community were missing events because Twichell was not easily accessible. Kurt and Nelly were deeply involved in making certain that this renovation truly made the auditorium inclusive for individuals of varying mobility needs, while ensuring that nothing was done that would degrade the beautiful acoustics of that space. Deep in his heart, I believe Kurt was a musician. He was kind, generous, and whip-smart to the end."

The Zimmerlis enabled progress in the Petrie School of Music by providing endowed scholarships for Converse students, endowed funding for instrument repairs, and gifts for Steinway pianos that led to Converse in 2005 becoming the first women's college achieve All-Steinway School designation.

Doug Weeks, Babcock Professor of Piano and longtime friend of Mr. Zimmerli, would regularly stop by the Zimmerli's home to play the piano for them. He recalls how the Zimmerlis decided to celebrate their 50th wedding with anniversary $100,000 donation toward a Steinway. They sought Weeks' help to choose one, with Weeks spending a few hours playing a selection of pianos until Mr. Zimmerli found the appropriate one. "Kurt's genbeyond was words," remarked Doug Weeks. "What he did for Converse, the community of Spartanburg, and for the Brevard Music Center will go on for generations."

Under Mr. Zimmerli's guidance, Converse designed and implemented a comprehensive campus master plan that focused on creating an attractive and welcoming environment. As the Buildings and Grounds Committee chair, he collaborated with Converse faculty, administrators, and students; worked with architects; negotiated with building contractors; and oversaw the design and construction of Phifer Science Hall, Milliken Fine Building, and the Weisiger Center at the Sally Abney Rose Physical Activity Complex. Zimmerli Common, part Converse's award-winning apartment housing facility Converse seniors known as "The Heath," was named after Kurt and Nelly Zimmerli and is a gathering place for both large groups and smaller circles of friends, offering a fireplace, vaulted ceilings, a full kitchen and the technical capabilities necessary for performance and meeting needs.

In 2019 the Zimmerlis championed the campaign to renovate Twichell Auditorium, making a lead gift towards the renovation of the world-class performance hall on the Converse campus that was near to their hearts. In honor of their support, Converse bestowed the name Zimmerli Performance Center on the facility that houses Twichell Auditorium, which has long been hailed as one of the South's leading performance venues.

At the Zimmerli Performance Center dedication ceremony, Converse Life Trustee and former Spartanburg mayor Bill Barnet reflected on the contribution that Mr. Zimmerli made to the lives of those in the Spartanburg community. "Kurt Zimmerli and his wife Nelly entered the United States with very little resources," Barnet said. "They moved from the Northeast to Spartanburg, South Carolina, and they built a family and a remarkable business. They created a very special understanding and appreciation for the arts and for culture, and they created an enormous impact on what you and I share today – not only in this place but in many other aspects of our community. Just think for a moment across the space that is Spartanburg – of the entrance to the library and the sculpture that is there. Of the wonderful fountain that was created at their behest to honor their friend Hans Balmer at the Spartanburg Community College campus downtown, or the amphitheater in the middle of our community that bears their name. They have done so much for our lives and it's appropriate, I think, that we spend a moment in appreciation for what they have done...It is important to recognize that there is not one building that I know of on the Converse campus that his patience, skill, love for the campus, quality of engineering, and his ability to incorporate great taste into a building are not present. He is a project engineer but he is more than that, and he has given his life to making this campus – as he has to Spartanburg - something very special."

How small businesses can overcome common cash flow challenges

(StatePoint) A new study reveals that the majority of small business owners and the self-employed share pressing money management struggles.

The 2021 State of Small Business Payments and Cash Flow report, released by Intuit QuickBooks, found that 75% of small businesses in the U.S. feel stressed about cash flow, and nearly a third aren't using any tools to manage or forecast their cash flows. Not surprisingly, 56% of U.S. small business owners report having made a poor business decision due to concerns about insufficient cash flow.

"Small businesses face unique challenges in the management of their finances. Too often, they track and manage their money in more than one place, which can lead to increased fees, lack of visibility, and wasted time," says Rob Daniel, director, management, product Intuit QuickBooks.

Part of the problem is that small business banking accounts often come with fees and minimum balance requirements, driving many small business owners to use personal checking accounts, even when a business checking account provides the specific features small businesses need to run their business and pay their employees.

Small businesses can benefit greatly from one streamlined digital financial management solution that integrates all aspects of their business finances -- banking, bill pay, payroll, payments and more - endto-end. Without this, small business owners can spend hours a week managing their cash flow. In fact, more than 60% of U.S. small businesses spend three hours or more a week managing money for their business.

Daniel says that all-inone digital banking platforms can be a lifeline for small businesses, helping them holistically manage and plan their finances affordably and efficiently.

One example QuickBooks Cash, a banking services solution aimed at helping drive small business efficiency through technology, which delivers what many other current business bank accounts don't. It offers no monthly fees, no minimum balance requirements, planning and forecasting tools, and an overall banking experience that works seamlessly with QuickBooks' additional offerings to enable small businesses to accept payments and pay teams and vendors with automatic reconciliation for easy financial management. Additionally, the bank account's Envelopes feature makes saving easy, allowing for high-yield interest buckets for routine expenses or long-term goals. "This tool can also deliver faster money movement

and help small businesses discover options for accessing capital. By incorporating the availability of instant payments for QuickBooks eligible Payments transactions and personalized loan recommendations, we're building a digital tool that helps accelerate the growth of small businesses," says Daniel.

S.C. Small Business Development Centers urges preparation for hurricane season

Columbia - The South Carolina SBDC network, state's principal provider of small business assistance, urges small businesses to prepare for the 2021 Atlantic hurricane season, extending through November 30.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) Climate Prediction Center is forecasting another above-normal Atlantic hurricane season, with a likely range of 6 to 10 hurricanes (winds of 74 mph or higher), including 3 to 5 major hurricanes (category 3, 4 or 5; with winds of 111 mph or higher).

"Now is the time for small business owners to contact the SC SBDC,' said SC SBDC State Director Michele Abraham. "One of our 50 consultants located throughout the state can help them develop comprehensive business continuity, emergency preparedness and disaster recovery plans at no fee."

In the past several years, South Carolina has faced multiple hurricane threats which caused significant damage to homes and businesses. "Last year's recordbreaking season serves as a reminder to all residents in coastal regions or areas prone to inland flooding from rainfall to be prepared for the 2021 hurri-

Abraham. With the arrival of June, the SC SBDC network encourages businesses to consider the following aspects of disaster preparedness: protecting staff, building/property, data and inventory.

season,"

cane

It is also critical to prepare a post-disaster recovery plan which may include provisions to relocate to a pre-identified site, retrieve vital data (including employee, customer and vendor records) and operate efficiently with a smaller staff.

The SC SBDC also strongly encourages businesses to back up data and secure essential files such as tax records, legal documents and financial reports.

The SC SBDC is a public-private partnership that leverages higher education and economic development resources to serve the needs of aspiring and existing small businesses. As a principal responder in the state's Emergency Support Function ESF-24 for Business & Industry, the SC SBDC is a vital economic development organization that supports disaster preparedness, recovery, and mitigation through its Business Continuation Services. Disaster preparedness materials, tips resources are available at SCSBDC.com.

After a declared disaster, SC SBDC consultants are available to help affected businesses apply for a lowinterest disaster recovery loan through the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA). These loans help compensate businessfor damaged and destroyed assets such as real estate, personal property, machinery, equipment and inventory.

SC Emergency Management Division officially launched hurricane.sc, an interactive website that will guide people through the fundamentals of being prepared for hurricanes and tropical storms.

A hurricane preparedness checklist and other emergency preparedness resources from the SBA are available at SBA Emergency Preparedness Resources.

Twenty South Carolina Small Business Development Centers (SC SBDC) located throughout the state's 46 counties offer no-fee individual, confidential business consulting. Highly-trained consultants assist both existing and startup companies by providing a variety of services including business plan development, fiscal and operations management, human resources, financing options, marketing strategies and much more. In addition to conducting a variety of affordable education workshops, SBDC centers refer clients useful business resources. Specialized services include government contracting, exporting, technology commercialization, veterans' business assistance and minority outreach.

Self driving cars stuck in neutral on the road to acceptance

(Orlando, FL) A new AAA survey on automated vehicles reveals that only one in ten drivers (12%) would trust riding in a selfdriving car. Even more Americans – 28% – don't know how they feel about the technology, signaling consumers are stuck in neutral on the road to accepting self-driving cars. AAA believes consumer sentiment of automated vehicles will be driven by tangible information on key issues and, equally important, quality education and experience.

Consumers told AAA that they have a desire to see more news stories or public information on key issues surrounding selfdriving vehicles like safety and liability:

Six in ten (57%) Americans say they would like to have a clear understanding of who will be legally responsible in the event of a crash with a self-driving vehicle.

Half (51%) are interested about laws to make sure self-driving cars are safe.

> FLAWLESS SEAWATER

Half (49%) want to know how vulnerable they will be to hackers.

"Consumers have made it clear what it will take to overcome their doubts consistent and transparent information - which will help make them feel safer about the idea of riding in a self-driving car," said Greg Brannon, AAA's director of Automotive

Engineering and Industry Relations. "AAA's automated vehicle survey tell us when people have the opportunity to take back control or even build their understanding of how this technology works, they are much more likely to embrace it."

Americans specifically voiced their opinion on what would make them feel safer about self-driving cars. Seven in ten (72%) U.S. adults would feel safer riding in a selfdriving car if they had the ability to take over control if something goes wrong. A similar proportion (69%) would feel safer if there was a human backup driver. Half (47%) would feel safer knowing the self-driving car has passed rigorous testing and inspections. Four in ten (42%) would feel safer after seeing or experiencing a demonstration prior to getting into a self-driving car.

"Knowing how people truly feel about self-driving cars will help the industry to identify the steps needed to move consumers towards greater acceptance," continued

Automated vehicles are still decades away from hitting the roads, however AAA conducts research like this study and others to help inform and encourage the industry, media and policymakers to find ways to help consumers connect better with advanced vehicle technology.

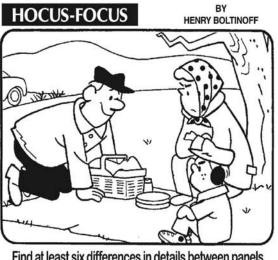

Methodology

Due to a change in methodology in 2020, this year's survey results are not directly comparable to results from prior years. This survey was conducted January 17 - 19, 2020, using a probability-based panel designed to be representative of the U.S. household population overall. The panel provides sample coverage of approximately 97% of the U.S. household population. Most surveys were completed online; consumers without internet access were surveyed over the phone. A total of 1,301 interviews were completed among U.S. adults, 18 years of age or older. The margin of error for the study overall is 4% at the 95% confidence level. Smaller subgroups have larger error margins.
