John Lane finalist for Burroughs Medal

Wofford College professor and author John Lane has been named a finalist for the prestigious John Burroughs Medal, created in 1926 to recognize the best in nature writing.

Lane, a professor of English and environmental studies and director of Wofford's Goodall Environmental Studies Center, will be recognized in April at the Annual Literary Awards Ceremony of the John Burroughs Associa-tion at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City. The award honors the literary legacy of Burroughs, credited with creating the modern nature essay. It is given "to a distinguished book of nature writing that combines scientific accuracy, first-hand fieldwork and excellent natural history writing," according to the Burroughs Association. Previous medalists include Aldo Leopold, Rachel Carson, and South Carolinian Archibald Rutledge.

This year, in an unprecedented move in, the association will recognize the four finalists' "natural history books of uncommon distinction," in addition to honoring the winner of the award, Brian Doyle, author of the novel "Marten, Marten."

Lane is the author of a dozen books of poetry and prose, including six from the University of Georgia Press. His latest book from UGA is "Coyote Settles the South." On Thursday, March 23, Lane and Dan Flores, author of "Coyote America," will lead a dialogue on coyotes as part of the Tyson Family Lecture on the Preservation and Restoration of Southern Ecosystems at Wofford. The program, which is free and open to the public, will be held at 7 p.m. in Leonard Auditorium in Main Building on Wofford's campus. Lane's "Abandoned Quarry: New & Selected Poems" includes much of his published poetry from over the past 30 years, plus a selection of new poems. His new book of poems, "Anthropocene Blues," is forthcoming this year. Lane's first novel, "Fate Moreland's Widow," was published by the late Pat Conroy's Story River books in early 2015. Lane has won numerous awards, including the 2001 Phillip D. Reed Memorial Award for Outstanding Writing on the Southern Environment given by the Southern Environmental Law Center. In 2011 he won the Glenna Luschei Prairie Schooner Award, and in 2012 "Abandoned Quarry" won the Southeastern Independent Booksellers Alliance Poetry Book of the Year prize. As an environmentalist, Lane was named the 2013 Water Conservationist of the Year by the South Carolina Wildlife Federation and the Clean Water Champion by Upstate Forever. In 2014, he was inducted into the South Carolina Academy of Authors. Lane and his wife, Betsy Teter, cofoundered Spartanburg's Hub City Writers Project.

Unworldly comedy abounds in Blithe Spirit

The Spartanburg Little Theatre's next production in its 2016-17 season is the classic Noel Coward farce Blithe Spirit, which first premiered on London's West End in 1941. Made famous by the 1945 film version starring Rex Harrison, Blithe Spirit opens on Friday, March 10 and runs for two weekends through March 19. Performances are Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 pm and Sunday afternoons at 3 pm.

"Blithe Spirit is one of those classic screwball comedies that still works today," says John Fagan, guest director for Blithe Spirit. "The recent Broadway revival starring Angela Lansbury really put Blithe Spirit back on the theater map. It is classic Noel Coward, full of wit and wisdom, and most of all lots of laughs."

Blithe Spirit features a who's who of Upstate theater veterans, including Spartanburg Little Theatre executive artistic director Jay Coffman, BJ Koonce, Tiffany Nave, Harmonie Skipper, Robert Searle, Jennifer Januchowski, and Anna Lee Altman.

Tickets for Blithe Spirit can be purchased by calling the Chapman Cultural Center box office at (864) 542-2787 or by ordering online at www.chapmanculturalcenter.org. Tickets are $25 for adults, $24 for seniors and $20 for students.

Wofford students have spent a lot of time writing during January.

Wofford Interim class 'trains' students to write creatively

During the month of January, a band of Wofford students wrote hundreds of thousands of words. They wrote for fun, for credit and, most importantly, for growth.

"I want to encourage my students to write and to love writing and to be able to talk about literature, but in the end it's really about building discipline," says Dr. Tracy Revels, professor of history, who taught The Writer's Workshop during Interim.

Lee Holden, a third-year history and philosophy major, enjoyed the discipline and structure of the class.

"I got a feel for the dayto-day grind of writing. It really comes down to persistence," says Holden. "It's useful for people who struggle with putting words to page. This class put an emphasis on writing no matter what because you can only move forward if you keep trying."

The class spent their days speaking with other writers, such as Wofford's own Farahnaz Afaq '18, who wrote her own autobiographical children's book based on her story as an Afghan refuge. She took The Writer's Workout the prior year to learn writing techniques and devices and to practice using a variety of prompts.

Prompts ranged from trying to portray one specific emotion or taking photos people from the of Victorian era and creating backstories and situations them. Samantha for Wagner '17 used this latter prompt as a springboard for the piece she read at the class Coffee House event, during which every student read their favorite work.

Wagner, a humanities and Spanish double major with a business minor, is thankful for the class for reminding her how to write for fun.

"I'd forgotten what it was like to write for prompts not for page numbers, so it was a wonderful sort of refocusing of my interests," says Wagner. "Creative writing requires the writer to synthesize experience, knowledge and imagination into one work. It is the intersection of critical thinking and creativity and thus is a crucial part of a liberal arts education. It's been invaluable for my time at Wofford and will be so moving forward."

At the end of the day, Revels says the class's focus on writing is foundational to education as well as forming healthy, wellrounded and interesting individuals, but also for community building.

"I'm not involved in the creative writing program at Wofford, but writing is very much a part of who I am," says Revels. "So when students write, I write with them. I wanted to create an open environment where we could all share and bond. ... There is a community here at Wofford that writes and encourages others to write so I hope my students can find a place within it."
