Spartanburg County teens selected to participate in Riley Institute's Emerging Public Leaders program

Greenville - The Riley Institute at Furman University has announced its 2019-2020 class of Emerging Public Leaders (EPL). Launched in 2002 by the Riley Institute, EPL is an intensive, statewide service-oriented leadership program for rising high school seniors.

EPL has accepted 18 rising high school seniors from across South Carolina for its 17th class, bringing the total number of students who have participated in the program to 260.

Included among the 2019-20 Riley Institute Emerging Public Leaders are Vee Edlund (Oakbrook Prep), Nayha Hussain (Riverside High School) and Ellie Toler (Spartanburg Day School).

Students will convene June 16-20 on the Furman campus where they will investigate topics such as engaging in the community, analyzing critical issues, practicing ethical leadership, developing communication and presentation skills, and planning for the implementation of a service project. Thanks to generous sponsors including State Farm, Spinx, Walmart, and the Riley Institute, students attend EPL free of charge.

Following the summer, students work with Riley Institute staff, school officials, and residents in their communities to further develop their service project ideas and implement projects that address diversity and specific needs in their communities.

The students return to campus the following spring to present their community service projects to a panel of judges, and the winning project receives funds for program expansion or replication.

Spartanburg Fringe Arts Festival: A new and unusual Upstate festival seeks to broaden artistic horizons

By Steve Wong

For the entire month of June, Spartanburg Fringe Arts Festival will host performances, plays, cinema, comedy, spoken word, a fashion show, music, and an art exhibit to give public exposure to creative works that are often considered to be too unusual for mainstream acceptance.

Among the most notable events will be several performances of Fun Home, a Broadway musical that won five Tony Awards, including Best Musical. It will be produced by Proud Mary Theatre Company, South Carolina's first and only theatre company dedicated to presenting LGBTQ+ voices and stories. Fun Home, based on the controversial graphic novel memoir by Alison Bechdel, is set in the Bechdel Family FUNeral Home and is about the author's coming-of-age as a lesbian and her relationship with her gay father. A live orchestra will provide accompa-

Throughout the month, the art exhibit "Out of the Box" will be open for public viewing Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on evenings when the Festival is open.

City Council hears budget overview, approves rezoning for westside senior living center Via CityofSpartanburg.org

Spartanburg City Council got their first look at the proposed upcoming fiscal year 2019-2020 budget at their meeting on Monday, May 13th. City Staff projects a 4 percent growth in overall revenue, with 7 percent growth in property taxes. That property tax growth represents the biggest gains for the City in more than a decade, a strong indicator of the growth seen in recent years both in Downtown Spartanburg and throughout the city as a whole.

This year's largest budget discussion will hinge around the need for a new City Fire Department headquarters. A new option for the Fire Department will be needed soon, as both the City Police Department and City administrative staff will be vacating the current City Hall within the next few years as part of a joint facilities agreement with Spartanburg County. In 2017, Spartanburg County voters passed a 1 percent sales tax increase to fund a new County Courthouse and new facilities for Spartanburg County Administration, City Hall, and the respective police agencies for both County and City. However, fire department facilities were not included in the referendum, leaving the City to fund a new fire department facility on its own.

Other expended expenditure highlights this year include a 3 percent proposed cost-of-living increase for City employees, a $264,000 mandatory increase to the employer contribution to the state retirement system, and an increase in funding to the City's legacy pension system.

According to the City Manager, either plan would require a millage increase of 3 mills to fund the new facility and would require the city to take on around $7.6 million in debt. Council is expected to discuss both possibilities during a budget workshop on May 28 prior to a public hearing on the proposed budget.

Also at Monday's meeting, Council voted 6-0 to approve a rezoning request that will allow construction of a new senior living facility on the west side. Located near Texas Roadhouse on W.O. Ezell Blvd. the facility will feature eight assisted living studios, 36 one bedroom assisted living units, 12 memory care single units, and eight memory care companion suites.

If it's a teenager's room, it's messy, right?

the American Counseling Association

Not every teenager's room looks like a cyclone just hit, but many do. And while some teens certainly have inherited that neat gene, for many parents their teen's messy room is often the reason for lectures and arguments.

In reality, most teens don't see their rooms as messy. What they see is a place where they can be private and independent. Becoming more independent is a normal part of the developmental process, and a room that looks chaotic, and that probably frustrates mom and dad, is one easy and safe way of declaring this independence.

Endless arguments about that messy room seldom change the situation, but a few sensible family rules might make life easier.

One rule is that while you may be able to live with some degree of messy, what you can't abide is health-threatening. Dirty dishes and old food wrappers attract bugs and that's not acceptable.

Another good rule is that hiding the mess behind a closed door is not the answer. You can agree to knock before entering, but as a parent you need to be allowed in. A teen hiding a messy room behind a closed door is not developing the basic responsibility needed for adult life.

There also has to be a rule that the mess doesn't flow over into family areas. Teenagers, usually without realizing what they're doing, like to signal their independence and mark their territory by dropping sneakers and jackets every-

A good starting point toward a neater teenager's room is to offer to help, but not to do the job for him or her. Often the mess is so out of control the teen doesn't know where to start. Parental suggestions on how to break the job into smaller parts can help, as do tips on storage and sort-

You can also allow for independence by allowing your teen to have control over how he or she wants to decorate their space. Those wall posters may not be to your taste but probably mean a lot to your teen.

There are lots of areas where parental standards are worth pushing. A messy room, as long as it's not an unhealthy place, is seldom one. Losing something special in the mess, inviting a new friend over, or just a lack of clean clothes may help motivate change. Don't push too hard though, just help, encourage and praise change when it hap-

Students make their mark on Wofford's Marsh Hall

Wilson Oswald, a sophomore from Summerville, has worked all year to upgrade Marsh Hall's image to match its newly renovated interior. During the year he renamed the fourth floor the Penthouse, held inspired communitybuilding and educational programming for residents and just created a new, welcoming study space near the building's lobby

"I wanted to end the year with a beautification of Marsh project," says Oswald, a physics major who serves as a resident assistant in the residence hall. "It's a great residence hall for building community. Students can leave their doors open. That makes people friends a lot faster." Oswald recruited Jonathan Hall, a junior English major from Mebane, N.C., to help.

"When Wilson approached me, I thought, I have stuff already that will make this easier," says Hall, referring to sketches and the concept, which draws from landmarks on campus and in Spartanburg.

Oswald then mobilized Create, an initiative of the Wofford Wellness Center that offers students a regular creative outlet and a chance to destress through Eliza Taylor '19, a biology major from Greenville, Tenn., who begins dental school in the fall, has spent the year helping Lisa Lefebvre, director of employee wellness and medical services, plan and organize Create events. When the group decided the Marsh study room mural also would make a fun campus outreach program, she invited students to "leave your mark on Marsh" and made the mural the final Create project of the year.

"It was a great way to integrate more people and to take a break from studying for exams," she says. "Marsh is special. Love it or hate it, everyone has a memory here."

Veteran raising awareness about unexpected Parkinson's symptoms

(StatePoint) McFarland's family was concerned when he started taking pictures of clouds and posting them on social media with urgent messages about how they were symbols about the need to repent and get ready for the end of the world. His frequent bouts of paranoia and experience with surprising visions seemed out of character, especially since McFarland was a successful businessman, running one of the largest retirement communities in Oregon, and a retired U.S. Air Force senior master sergeant.

It turned out that these delusions and hallucinations were non-motor symptoms of Parkinson's disease, which McFarland had been diagnosed with years before. For McFarland, these symptoms were harder to manage than the motor symptoms typically associated with Parkinson's disease, such as tremors, rigidity or slowness of movement.

"My neurologist was able to recognize my non-motor symptoms of Parkinson's. Some of my hallucinations and delusions were frightening to me and upsetting to my loved ones, and adjusting my treatment helped lessen this burden," he says. "To help others recognize these symptoms, I've gotten involved in my local Parkinson's support group, and am sharing my story."

Although there is no clear understanding of the exact cause of hallucinations and delusions associated with Parkinson's, around half of all people with Parkinson's may experience these symptoms over the course of their disease.

For McFarland, when he first began to experience hallucinations and delusions, he recognized that what he was seeing and believing wasn't quite real. But it was confusing to him and as his condition progressed, he began to lose insight. For example, his belief that the end of the world was coming was triggered by a brief news story about a sink hole in South America. He also began to distrust family and friends. After his wife left a camping trip early, he became suspicious that she might be trying to connect with an old boyfriend. In reality, she had simply needed a much-deserved break from work and caregiving responsibilities.

Left unaddressed, these non-movement symptoms can impact people with Parkinson's and their care partners' ability to make plans with family and friends and even sleep, according to a recent survey conducted by the Parkinson's Movement Disorder Alliance. Experts say that if you believe you or a loved one is experiencing hallucinations or delusions as a result of Parkinson's disease, the first step is talking to a movement disorder specialist. You can also go to MoretoParkinsons.com to learn more about what to expect and how to start the conversation with a physician.

While doctors may be able to address non-motor symptoms like hallucinations and delusions, it's important to keep in mind that everyone is different and for some, other nonmotor symptoms may still persist. McFarland continues to struggle with depression and anxiety, which are other common non-movement symptoms Parkinson's disease. McFarland sees a therapist to help manage those symptoms. Having a greater understanding of the disease and its possible symptoms has helped the McFarlands deal with them as they arise.

"Opening up about my fears and beliefs led to an improvement in my treatment plan and I'm experiencing fewer non-movement symptoms," says McFarland. "I hope that my story will encourage others to recognize these symptoms in themselves and others, because there are options to help."

Carolinians make plans to travel around the world this summer

N.C. Charlotte, According to a recent AAA Travel survey, two-thirds of leisure travelers plan to take vacations this summer. According to AAA Carolinas Travel bookings, the top destinations vary from warm beaches to ancient cities, with the common theme being that most travelers are planning to leave the U.S. this summer.

"Many Carolinians are looking forward to tropical breathtaking getaways, views or historic sites this summer," said Sarah Henshall, Vice President of AAA Carolinas Travel. "AAA recommends travelers plan ahead and book early with the expertise of a knowledgeable travel agent to maximize your vacation experience, saving time and money so you can focus on making vacation memories that will last well after summer fades away."

Top Summer Travel Destinations:

These are the top summer travel destinations, based on AAA Carolinas Travel bookings for trips June 1

- through August 15, 2019: 1. Alaska
- 2. Bahamas
- 3. Italy4. Florida
- 5. France
- 6. British Isles7. Germany
- 8. Ireland
- Jamaica
 Hawaii

Top trends for summer travel this year include:

* Orlando, Florida, remains a top destination for many families, especially those with kids. The city's world-famous theme parks are a top draw for families, as Universal Orlando Resort and Walt Disney World prepare to unveil new attractions this summer.

* Europe is a bucket list destination for many Americans, and this summer is no exception. London has grown in popularity compared with last year, while Rome, Dublin and Paris continue to be hot spots for top summer travel destina-

* Alaskan cruises are a top vacation choice for summer travelers this year, with Vancouver, Seattle and Anchorage topping the list of embarkation ports for these coveted sailings.

* After a harsh winter, many Americans will flock to warm-weather destinations, particularly those in Hawaii and the Caribbean. Punta Cana, Dominican Republic, has once again cracked the top 10 after briefly dipping off last year's list.

"These top locales are sure to see an influx of travelers this summer, but some people will be looking for great vacation spots with slightly fewer crowds," added Henshall. "Other destinations to watch this year that didn't quite make the top 10 list include Montego Bay, Jamaica; Calgary, Canada; Amsterdam, Netherlands; and Anaheim, California."

AAA's travel experts offer their top tips for travelers planning summer vacations, including:

* Plan ahead – Book early for the best deals and availability on hotels, airfare, car rentals and more.

* Work with a travel agent

- Travel agents often have access to extra amenities and added benefits to help plan the perfect summer vacation. They can also be a tremendous help in the event something changes or goes wrong on your trip.

* Be flexible – If your schedule permits, avoid traveling during peak times this summer, including Memorial Day weekend and around Independence Day, to encounter less congestion and fewer crowds.

* Safety first – If driving, get plenty of rest before setting out on your road trip. Schedule breaks every two hours or 100 miles to remain alert and avoid driving drowsy.

* Make sure your vehicle is road trip ready – Take your vehicle to a trusted repair facility to perform any needed maintenance before heading out. Pack an emergency kit that includes a mobile phone and car charger, a flashlight with extra batteries, a first-aid kit, a basic toolkit, and drinking water and snacks for all passengers.

* Pack your patience — Summer is one of the busiest travel times of the year. Expect heavy crowds and allow plenty of time to get to your destination safely.

Be Road Trip Ready

While many travelers will tour Europe, take cruises, visit theme parks and soak up the sun in Hawaii or the Caribbean, road trips remain a top choice for many families this summer. AAA expects to be called on to rescue nearly 8 million Americans at the roadside this summer season, with the top reasons being flat tires, lockouts and dead batteries.

AAA Automotive experts recommend these car care tips to prepare your vehicle for a summer road trip:

* Tires - Make sure to inflate tires to the recommended pressure listed in the owner's manual or on the driver-side doorjamb. To check tread wear, insert a quarter upside down; if the top of George Washington's head is visible at any point, it's time to start shopping for new tires.

* Brakes – Inspect the brake system for fluid leaks, and check all components for wear at every oil change and whenever there are signs of a potential problem. Pay attention to any brake warning indicators on your car's instrument panel, or any grinding or scraping noises when applying the brakes.

* Battery – After three years, have your battery tested to determine remaining capacity. In many areas, AAA members can have a AAA Mobile Battery Service technician come to their home or work to perform a free battery test and install a new battery on site if needed.

* Fluids – Change the oil at the intervals specified by the vehicle manufacturer and use an oil that meets the vehicle's factory specifications. Also, check the engine coolant and brake, transmission, and power steering flu-
