Hundreds of roads, bridge, and infrastructure projects across the county are in-progress, fueled by the penny sales tax passed in 2023. From the newly-repaved Highway 290 to repairs coming to dangerous intersections and dilapidated bridges, Spartanburg County has hit the ground running on the 577 projects approved by voters. USC Upstate wins 2025 Big South Men's Golf Championship

Fripp Island – USC Upstate men's golf returned to Ocean Creek Golf Course for the Big South Golf Championship, earning the title of 2025 Big South Champions for the first time in program history.

Advancing to the match play final for the first time since 2019 against Charleston Southern, Upstate saw itself in a close contest with the Buccaneers, all coming down to a 19-hole match with Jaskaran Sohal, who birdied the extra hole to secure the championship title. Helping the Spartans to the win was Ross Wright, defeating his opponent 2&1, complete with four birdies and an eagle. Jackson Stone won his match 3&2, carding six birdies in the final.

Head Coach Todd Lawton had all the emotion after the win, stating, "To say that a group of guys persevered would not do it justice it deserves for winning this championship. The guys embraced the opportunity and our coaching push over the last few weeks especially. They are a close group who want great things for each other. I want this experience to be transformative and not just a jubilant transaction. I've been doing this a long time and have had the opportunity to coach great players and teams. This truly has its own place in my heart and my record as a coach. So proud that these guys wear the Upstate "U" and want their best every day! Go Spartans!"

SMC Hall of Fame baseball coach Tim Wallace announces retirement

Adapted from information courtesy of Spartanburg Methodist College

For more than three decades, one man has ruled the diamond at Spartanburg Methodist College. One voice has been developing players on the field and good young men off it. SMC Head Baseball Coach Tim Wallace has been a coach, mentor, leader, and teacher to thousands of baseball players over the years. Wallace recently announced that he has decided to hang up his whistle and fungo bat and retire from coaching at the end of this year.

"It's truly been a privilege to lead this program for so long. I'm honored to have had the opportunity to coach so many great players and young men over the course of my career," Wallace said.

Wallace achieved nearly every accolade available to a coach at his level, including induction into the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) Baseball Coaches Hall of Fame in 2014 and accumulating 1,351 wins, fourth most for a college baseball coach as of the end of the 2024 season, according to the Society for American Baseball Research.

"There is not much you can say about Tim that hasn't already been said over the years," said Athletic Director Megan Aiello. "He has built an incredible baseball program here at SMC and laid the foundation for success long into the future. His legacy will forever be stamped on SMC."

SMC." In Wallace's 34 years at SMC, he led the program to the heights of success amassing 12 NJCAA Region 10 titles and seven trips to the Division 1 JUCO World Series, including three in a row from 2012 - 2014. He was named Region 10 Coach of the Year eight times, Eastern District Coach of the Year six times, and American Baseball Coaches Association Regional Coach of the Year numerous times. He was also a part of the inaugural group of recipients for the NJCAA Coaches Legacy Awards. He also provided a number of other coaches with their start in the sport.

"Coach Wallace gave me my start in baseball, and I've never forgotten the things he taught me. Over the years, I've coached many of his players as they moved from SMC to other colleges and all of them loved their experience playing for him because of the type of man he is," said Monte Lee, associate head baseball coach at the University of South Carolina. "He's made a tremendous impact on the young men who have played for him and the coaches who have worked for him, and I consider him a lifelong friend."

Austin Alexander, owner of Diamond Prospects, a baseball recruiting service in South Carolina, played for Wallace during SMC's 1995 and 1996 seasons before transferring to the College of Charleston. In 1999, he returned to SMC as an assistant coach under Wallace. He says his three years coaching for Wallace laid a foundation for more than twenty-five years of success.

"Outside of my parents, Coach Wallace is the most influential person in my life. He gave me a shot first as a player and trusted me in big games; later as his assistant coach, he entrusted me with real responsibility – recruiting, developing players, and behindthe-scenes details that assist me to this day," Alexander said. "Coach allowed me to learn on the job. He taught me the importance of delegation, how to lead without micromanaging, and also that quality people attract quality people - wisdom I didn't fully grasp as a young man but carry with me now. His impact shaped not only my career, but the careers of so many accomplished coaches and players across the country. His coaching tree will continue to bear fruit because it was rooted by an individual that we respect and revere so much. His records are long, and the accolades are many, but the man, the Coach Wallace that mentored me – he was exactly who and what I needed to be the person I am today." For Wallace, it was all about the players. He said most important achievement has been the quality of young men who have come through the program and his opportunity to help shape them on and off the field. Wallace mentored 18 NJCAA All-Americans, hundreds who have gone on to NCAA Division I programs, and more than 150 who signed professional contracts, most notably four-time

Major League Baseball

All-Star and three-time gold glove winner Orlando Hudson, who played for Wallace in 1997 and 1998.

"Tim Wallace, what an Impressive mind this man has along with being a great coach. He will make a man out of you quick, and if you couldn't take it, take your uniform off!! He was what my uncles were to me - hard-nosed, took no nonsense, and straight to the point," said Hudson, the special assistant to the general manager and farm director for the Arizona Diamondbacks. "The game of baseball needs more guys like him from the MLB level all the way down to T-ball. I miss the days of him driving down to Darlington to hunt with me and my dad. Love this man, a true inspiration to my career!"

Quincy Foster, former outfielder for the Florida Marlins (now Miami Marlins), praised Wallace for his mentorship and leadership.

"To me, Tim Wallace is the best coach-motivator-leader-father figure that a young man could ever have played for. Coach Wallace made me the man that I am today, the coach that I am today, and the father I am today. I am so happy and blessed to have had him in my life," Foster said.

In addition to his accolades as a coach, Wallace was also an accomplished player. He started his college career at Baptist College (now Charleston Southern) before moving on to Wofford for his final three years. He was drafted in the second round of the MLB draft and played seven years of professional baseball. He is also a member of the SMC Hall of Honor and the Wofford College Athletic Hall of Fame.

For the past year, Wallace has been serving as a special assistant to the president at SMC to help guide the college's transition to NAIA sports, a position he will continue. A search for Wallace's replacement will begin immediately.

USC's College of Arts and Sciences renamed following $75 million transformational gift

Adapted from information provided by the University of South Carolina

Columbia University of South Carolina has officially renamed its largest and oldest academic unit as the McCausland College of Arts and Sciences, recognizing a historic $75 million gift from alumni Peter and Bonnie McCausland and The McCausland Foundation.

The new name was unveiled during a ceremony on the university's iconic Horseshoe, celebrating the McCauslands' commitment to student success, faculty excellence, and research innovation. Their gift will fund one of the nation's top career development programs for liberal arts and sciences students, expand neuroscience research and education, and support the recruitment and retention of world-class faculty.

"This gift from Peter and Bonnie and The McCausland Foundation marks a new beginning for our university's oldest and largest college," said USC President Michael Amiridis. "It strengthens the foundation of arts, humanities, and Peter McCausland, a 1971 USC history graduate and founder of Airgas Inc., said his time in the College of Arts and Sciences played a crucial role in his personal and professional development.

"Through this gift, I hope to continue the legacy of excellence in the College of Arts and Sciences while helping students leave USC with the curiosity and criticalthinking skills they need to pursue their dreams," McCausland said.

Empowering Students, Advancing ResearchThe McCauslands' investment will significantly boost career preparation for liberal arts and sciences students by providing stipends for up to 150 paid internships annually.

These stipends remove financial barriers and allow students to explore career pathways while gaining valuable experience — positioning USC among the nation's best in career development for liberal arts fields. The gift also advances research and teaching in neuroscience — USC's fastest-growing major — by funding student and faculty research and bolstering the work of the McCausland Center for Brain Imaging. Since its founding in 2006 through a previous McCausland gift, the center has secured nearly $50 million in research grants remains a cornerstone of USC's brain health initiatives.In addition, the gift expands the McCausland Faculty Fellowship, which has supported outstanding early and mid-career faculty since 2014. Samuels. "The liberal arts and sciences are essential to higher education, and this support allows us to better serve our students and our state."Samuels added that the McCauslands' legacy is not just financial, but inspirational. "Peter McCausland's journey from a USC history major to a successful entrepreneur is a testament to the power of a liberal arts education. This gift empowers us to provide that same transformative experience to even more students."

With the renaming, the McCausland College of Arts and Sciences joins other distinguished named colleges at USC, including the Darla Moore School of Business, Arnold School of Public Health, Joseph F. Rice School of Law, and the Molinaroli College of Engineering and Comput-

The arrangement between the companies includes a plan to advance specific projects for up to 11 7HA gas turbines consistent with Duke Energy's integrated resource plans.
