Downtown Spartanburg development spurs record job growth, $1.77 billion economic impact

Edited and composed using information provided by OneSpartanburg, Inc.

SPARTANBURG, S.C. - Ongoing and recently completed construction projects in downtown Spartanburg are expected to generate more than $1.77 billion in economic impact across the county, according to a new report. The analysis, conducted by Clemson University researcher Bob Brookover, highlights $1.24 billion in District Office Building, new downtown investments announced or completed since 2017. The report credits this surge in development with supporting 13,706 combined jobs - surpassing the workforce at Spartanburg County's largest employer,

BMW Manufacturing Co. "All of this growth leads to new jobs, the hiring of more teachers, the construction of new school buildings, improvements to our road network, and more critical support for first responders," Mayor Jerome Rice said. "We are incredibly fortunate to have a private sector that has made a historic commitment to improving our citizens' lives. The partnership between the city, county, state and private sector has positioned Spartanburg residents for long-term success. It's all about the people."

Major projects driving downtown growth include Fifth Third Park and its parking deck, the Grain new hotels and mixed-use developments on former Herald-Journal and City Hall sites, the Planetarium Learning Center, and multiple multifamily projects such as The Charles, The Fitzgerald and 111 Main. Streetscape improvements along West Main Street also contribute to the revitalization effort.

The report also notes Spartanburg's hotel industry continues to outperform similar markets across the region. The city's hotel occupancy rate reached 71.1%, a 9.3% increase from the previous year. Revenue per available room (RevPAR) climbed to $77, up 18.5%, outpacing markets including Birmingham, Ala., Chattanooga, Tenn., and Myrtle Beach, S.C.

"The data couldn't be any clearer," said Billy Dunlap, chief tourism development officer for OneSpartanburg, Inc. "The market needs, and can support, more hotel product. As new properties come online, the benefit to local businesses and job creation will be immense."

"OneSpartanburg and our partners are committed to ensuring current and new residents have every opportunity to succeed," said Allen Smith, president and CEO of OneSpartanburg, Inc.

"Thirteen thousand seven hundred six jobs represent strengthened families, thriving local businesses and a promising future."

USC Upstate launches smart recycling pilot with Waste Wise Innovation

SPARTANBURG, S.C. The University of South Carolina Upstate has partnered with Waste Wise Innovation (WWI) to introduce a new smart recycling pilot program designed to make campus sustainability more interactive and datadriven.

As part of the initiative, USC Upstate will install Topper Stopper<sup>TM</sup> smart recycling units across campus. Each unit features an interactive display that educates students, faculty and staff on proper recycling practices, while transmitting real-time usage data to TS Analytics<sup>TM</sup>, WWI's reporting platform. The partnership highlights USC Upstate's leadership in environmental stewardship and its commitment to using technology to improve sustainability. By adopting tools such as Topper Stopper<sup>TM</sup> and TS Analytics<sup>TM</sup>, the university aims to track recycling performance, increase engagement and identify strategies that produce measurable results.

Through the pilot, USC Upstate will gain:

• Actionable insights into recycling rates across cam-

• Increased engagement through on-screen education and reminders.

• Data-driven improvement, identifying which efforts lead to the most impact.

WWI and USC Upstate are collaborating to determine optimal placement and rollout strategies for the smart units. With installation planned soon, both organizations view the project as a model for how data technology can advance recycling efforts in education, local government and corporate environments.

"This partnership demonstrates USC Upstate's commitment to sustainability innovation," said Amanda Karls, the university's director of institutional effectiveness and compliance.

"By introducing smart recycling on campus, we're not just asking our community to recycle — we're showing them the impact and educating them along the way."

Power of a Beat: USC Upstate volleyball hosting fundraiser for Children's Hospital

Adapted from information provided by USC Upstate

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — When the USC Upstate volleyball team takes the court Nov. 8 against Winthrop, the match will mean more than a win or loss. The Spartans will host the "Toys and Tiny Hearts" fundraiser to benefit the Pediatric Cardiology Unit at the Shawn Jenkins Children's Hospital at the Medical University of South Caro-lina - a cause deeply personal to both head coach Ali Skayhan and junior libero Emma

For Skayhan, the sound of a heartbeat carries special weight. Last December, her son, Leo, was born with a congenital heart defect called transposition of the great arteries. At just two weeks old, he underwent open-heart surgery at MUSC. "There were nights we didn't know if he'd make it," Skayhan said. "But then I saw another family bring toys to the hospital after losing their child, and it completely changed the atmosphere. That kindness stayed with me."

Months later, she returned to coaching with a new perspective - and met a player who understood that same fight.

DeSensi, from Louisville, Kentucky, was diagnosed with dilated cardiomyopathy as an infant after a virus attacked her heart.

Her parents worried she'd never be able to play sports. But volleyball, considered lower impact than others, became her way to prove them wrong.

"I was always full of energy," DeSensi said. "Volleyball gave me confidence and showed me I could do more than anyone expected."

After a decorated high school career at Assumption High, injuries slowed her early college years. She transferred to USC Upstate in 2023, drawn by the school's nursing program and the genuine connection she felt with Skayhan. "When I found out Emma had been through 12 heart surgeries, it hit home," Skayhan said. "I had just lived in a children's hospital with my own baby. It felt like more than coincidence."

Their shared experiences inspired the upcoming fundraiser. The team will collect toys and donations for children receiving cardiac care at MUSC, where Leo was treat-

"You never know what someone's going through," DeSensi said. "Even the smallest gift can remind a family that people care."

For Skayhan, the event is about gratitude and perspective. "Volleyball is what we do, but it's not who we are," she said. "This is about giving back and showing what it means to be part of something bigger."

Leo will celebrate his first birthday 10 days after the match. DeSensi, now pursuing a nursing degree, hopes to one day work with children like herself. On Nov. 8, every serve and rally will carry a message of hope — for Leo, for Emma, and for every tiny heart still fighting.
